State's Attorney Washes Hands of Blame for Blood If General Recalls Militia.

BLACK IS BRANDED MEMBER OF KLAN

Herrin Miners Celebrate Labor Day at Johnson
City as Funerals Occupy Home Town.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Herrin, Ill., September 1.—Late
this afternoon about 30 automobiles drove up to the rear of the Herrin
city hall and each one was loaded with rifles, shotguns and ammunition.
Efforts to trace the automobiles were unsuccessful.

Questions put to police and firemen who occupy the building were answered
by negative head shakes.

No one would talk and attempts to follow the cars met with little success.

BLACK IS CHARGED WITH BEING KLANSMAN.

Marion, Ill., September 1.—If Adjutant General Carlos E. Black takes the troops from Williamson county and any blood is shed after they leave, General Black and not Sheriff George Galligan nor nor anyone else is responsible, State's Attorney Delos Duty declared this afternoon.

"Williamson county is in anything but a peaceful state and, as in the past, the only pacifier is the military. We want law and order, but the situation is such that we cannot protect life and property and enforce law and order without the help of the Illinois national guard," Mr. Duty added.

"At a conference with General
Black and the sheriff this morning and speaking as the legal adviser of the sheriff I told General Black not to take the troops away. I did not ask that he leave all, but just some,"
Duty said.

"I told him that we needed the military here. And I also told him I based my request on my statement of my observations which are more correct than his."

"If he takes the military away the responsibility is on his own head, not on anyone else's."

Mr. Duty charged General Black with being a member of the Ku Klux Klan, qualifying his statement by saying "That so far as I can learn,
the general is a member of the Ku Klux Klan."

"I have told any number of people that and I will stick to it."

"Perhaps," Mr. Duty continued,
"that is why the general is so anxious to have the troops leave."

BLACK DECLINES TO DENY CHARGE.

Marion, Ill., September 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—When told of State's Attorney Delos Duty's statement in which he charged Adjutant General Carlos E. Black with being a member of the Ku Klux Klan, the general said:

"I will not lend dignity to such an absurdity by denying Mr. Duty's statement."

"We are not here to enter into any political discussion."

"We came here upon the request of Sheriff Galligan to assist him in the protection of life and property."

"We are going to continue to do so as long as we are here and we will stay here as long as the necessity exists."

Some observers here characterized Duty's statement as "political thunder."

10,000 MARCH IN LABOR PARADE

Spectacular Floats, Inspiring Music and Other Features Hold Attention of Great Crowds.

Proving once again the power and the union of the working men of the nation, the hosts of labor, 10,000 strong, marched through the downtown streets of Atlanta Monday morning in annual parade.

Spectacular floats, inspiring bands and hosts of working men and women alternated in line, as the marchers passed before the tens of thousands who were packed on the sidewalks to see them go by. It was the general opinion of the spectators that never before in the city's history had there been a labor day parade so creditable to the organizations it represents,
and one which spoke in such unmistakable terms of the high type of citizenry taking part.

Headed by a detachment of mounted police, the parade, in seven divisions, started at 10 o'clock and

CONTINUE PRESENT LABOR CONDITIONS, COOLIDGE'S PLEDGE

Lot of Working Man Today Described as "Best in History of American Wage Earners."

Washington, September 1.—A group of representatives of organized labor pledged their individual support to President Coolidge during a call at the white house today, and heard a pledge by the president to perpetuate conditions, which he described as "the best in the history of our wage earners."

Mr. Coolidge said the government was anxious to continue its efforts to promote the welfare of workmen,
but told his visitors he did not favor
a labor government. Likewise, he said, he did not favor a corporation government, a bank government or a farm government.

"I am for a common sense government," he added, "by all the people,
according to the American policy, and under the American constitution. I want all the people to continue to be partners in self-government."

"We do not need to import any foreign economic ideas or any foreign government. We have better stick to the American brand of government,
the American brand of equality, and the American brand of wages. America had better stay American."

125 Men in Delegation.

The president said the government would continue "its efforts to provide healthful, surroundings, education, reasonable conditions of employment, fair wages for fair work, stable business prosperity and the encouragement of religious worship."

The delegation was composed of about 125 men, including members of many labor unions, who came to the white house under an arrangement made by T. V. O'Connor, honorary president of the International Long-shoremen's union, and chairman of the shipping board. The president received them in the east room and George Frities, president of the Licensed Tugmen's association, introduced the visitors to him.

"We all carry union cards," said
Mr. Frities. "Industrially, we follow our chosen leaders, but politically we follow no man and no group of men. As citizens, we own the right to cast our own vote. We have never parted with that right and never will."

No Need of Imported Ideas.

"If anything is to be done by the government for the people who toil for the cause of labor, which is the sum of all other causes," the president said, "it will be by continuing its efforts to provide healthful surroundings, education, reasonable conditions of employment, fair wages for fair work, stable business prosperity, and the encouragement of religious worship."

Reciting statistics which he said,
"show that the American wage earner enjoys a buying power enormously greater than that of any other wage earner in the world," Mr. Coolidge declared:

"We do not need to import any foreign economic ideas or any foreign government."

Atlanta Pastors Take No Action On Defense Day

Observance of Day Is Debated for Several Hours Monday.

The Atlanta Evangelical association Monday decided to take no action on local observance of national defense day. This decision was reached after several hours deliberation, the motion being introduced and passed, immediately after a resolution of opposition to celebration of the day was offered.
It could not be learned whether this action is to be considered as final or whether the discussion will be renewed later.

Julian Boehm, chairman of the local committee, planning for defense day observance, appeared before the association and asked its support. W. A.
Sirman, member of the American Legion executive committee, delivered a strong address in favor of the defense day movement and urged the ministers to approve it.

After a discussion of several hours,
during which a number of speakers made addresses for and against defense day, a motion was introduced to oppose holding defense days. This motion was seconded. Dr. Marvin Williams then offered a motion that the association take no action in the matter at this time, which was seconded and adopted in short order.

Will Go Upon Stump

Washington, September 1.—
James M. Cox, democratic presidential nominee four years ago,
will take the stump for John W.
Davis two weeks hence and will campaign until election day, the democratic national committee announced today.

Other stump speakers will be Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war; Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale; Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut; Carl Vrooman, former secretary of commerce.

Irvin S. Cobb, the writer, was asked to campaign, but said an impending trip to Europe would prevent. He sent assurances of "indent desires for the success of democratic national ticket."

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Wheeling, W. Va., September 1.— Abolition of the railroad labor board in its present form and the setting up of more flexible machinery to govern railroad labor disputes was advocated here today by John W. Davis, the democratic presidential candidate.

Moreover, Mr. Davis, in a Labor day address to the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Assembly, subscribed to the broad principle that because of the widespread effect, industrial disputes have upon commerce and industry, it is the duty of the government to lend its aid and encouragement in every possible way to their settlement.

Mr. Davis expressed the view that in the setting up of machinery through which there could be "fair and equal discussion" of the subjects at issue with "thorough-going publicity," there were two fundamentals: first,
that the boards be composed of representatives of the employers and of the particular crafts concerned; this would leave out public representation, such as there now is on the board.

EIGHTY LOSE LIVES IN BIG HURRICANE

Islands Among West Indies Swept by Tornado That Leaves Death and Destruction in Wake.

St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, September 1.—At least 80 persons were killed, many were injured and numerous houses were destroyed and other material damage done by the hurricane which struck the islands in this vicinity the night of August 28 and ragged the following day, according to reports received here.

The reports say that on the island of Monserrat, in the British leeward group, 40 persons were killed and many injured.

Tortola, the largest of the British Virgin islands, is said to have been devastated. Twenty "eight persons were killed and 100 injured and most of the houses were destroyed.

On the island of Nevis, in the British leeward islands, four persons were killed and 200 houses destroyed.
At San Jan, eight persons met death.
Hundreds of persons on the various islands are homeless and are being sheltered in churches and the police stations. The cotton, limes and other crops are declared to have been destroyed or damaged.

The government here is sending building materials, food, medical supplies and doctors to the stricken islands. Many injured persons have been brought here for treatment.

SAVANNAH GETS $300 FINE ON CHARGE OF CHOKING WOMAN

Savannah, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—Declining to make a statement in his defense, J. D. Goddard was fined $300 here today in Recorder
Schwartz's court on charges of choking
Mrs. Mamie Tompkins. The man, well-known here, was arraigned on half-a-dozen charges, but was sentenced on the choking count.

DAWES TO CARRY FIGHT TO HOME OF LA FOLLETTE

Evanston, Ill., September 1.— Charles G. Dawes, republican vice presidential candidate, intends to carry his assault on the La Follette independent movement at an early date into Wisconsin, the home state of Senator La Follette.

Mr. Dawes' intentions were made known today. He has selected as the subject of his contemplated Milwaukee address, "The Constitution of the United States," and his discussion will be an extensive elaboration of the declaration made in his acceptance address that the La Follette ticket was asking the nation "to leave important constitutional moorings to embay, again into those contests through which it has fought up to the establishment of good government."

LA FOLLETTE HITS TWO OLD PARTIES IN FIRST SPEECH

Monopoly Question Dominant Issue of Presidential Campaign, Says Independent Candidate.

Washington, September 1.—Senator La Follette, independent candidate for president, declared in an address today to a far-flung audience that neither of the two old parties merited support of the nation's voters. Both, he said, are "serving the same masters and seeking to preserve intact the privileges they have yielded to favored interests."

On the other hand, the senator asserted, he and his followers welcome into their ranks "all who believe in orderly progress, under free speech, free press and free assemblage, to solve the problems which confront us."

"We would strike down the privileges enjoyed by the few," he added,
"and return to the simple principle of Jefferson and Lincoln."

Speech Is Broadcast.

The candidate, who does not expect to begin active campaigning for several weeks, delivered his Labor day message from the seclusion of a studio of a broadcasting station. Twelve other stations, one of them as far west as Kansas City, Mo., were linked by telephone with the station here.

Offing his coat in the hope of getting relief from the oppressive heat, Senator La Follette, who never before had spoken over the radio, leaned forward in a chair as he talked rapidly for 35 minutes into a microphone, visualizing, he said, later, an audience
before him.

Reiterating his contention that the monopoly question is the dominant issue of the campaign, Mr. La Follette insisted that the democratic and republican parties clearly had shown their subservience to special interests.
Neither offer any remedy for existing evils, he said; both are seeking to cloud the real issues of the campaign.

Hits Morgan European Plan.

The banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., declared Senator La Follette, is the "original source" of the republican and democratic plans respecting Europe, which, he insisted, are the same.

"The so-called Dawes plan," he added, "is merely the Morgan plan."
Declaring himself fortunate in having Senator Wheeler, of Montana, as his running mate, Mr. La Follette said he had no doubt that the "American people in November will bring to proper account the administration which has subjected Senator Wheeler to persecution under cover of the law, while permitting to remain unpunished the man whose corruption of public service he has exposed."

Will Tell About Washington.

During the campaign, Senator La Follette declared he intends to tell
"the American people exactly what has been going on in Washington" during his 18 years' service as a senator.

Lieut. Arnold Latest Hero PUMPED GAS FOUR HOURS IN AILING ENGINE

Of American World Fliers

By OTIS PRABODY SWIFT.
On Board U. S. S. Richmond, Ice Tackle, Labrador, September 1.—A new tale of pluck and heroism on the part of the four American aviators, who are now headed toward home on the last and easiest stage of their round-the-world flight, has been revealed as the fliers pause here briefly for their next hop.

This time the credit goes to Lieutenant Arnold, assistant to Lieutenant Smith, commander of the flight. Sunday was Arnold's birthday.

Only the "marvelous courage" of Arnold, according to Smith, saved
the plane in which the two made the 570-mile hop Sunday from Greenland to Labrador from disaster.

Four hours from Labrador, Smith's engine sputtered, faltered and threatened a speedy force landing, which would have put the flag-plane out of the flight. The principal trouble, it developed, lay in the failure of the fuel pump to function.

For four hours Arnold proceeded to pump gasoline into the engine mechanically at two strokes per minute,
under great difficulty.

Arnold modestly told the newspapermen that his feat was "nothing at all," because after the first half hour the pain to his arm and shoulder made them numb and insensible.

Arnold was the first flier ashore.
He waded knee-deep through the water and then joked with his companions about the battalion of photographers which awaited them.

But once aboard the Richmond, it was found that Smith's plucky assistant was unable to lift his right arm, and he almost collapsed as he attempted it. He then underwent two hours of desperate massaging by the ship's doctors before he was able to dine.

There were other perils in the flight which brought the airmen to North American soil.

"We dodged around icebergs like kide around city corners," Smith declared.

The flight was made at a maximum height of 100 feet to avoid fog

MILK COMMISSION PLAN IS ADOPTED BY CITY COUNCIL

Membership to Include Doctor and Representatives of Dairymen and City at Large.

PASTEURIZATION PLAN BATTLE IS POSTPONED

Alderman Duvall Will Present Ordinance to Commission Before Starting Fight in Council.

Creation of an Atlanta milk commission to survey the milk situation in Atlanta and make recommendations to mayor and council on measures aimed to improve the condition of the milk supply, especially as it affects infant health conditions, was voted by city council Monday afternoon without a dissenting vote.

The ordinance creating the commission was introduced by Alderman W.
R. Duvall, who announced that he would abandon for the time being his fight to require pasteurization of milk until the new commission could consider it and other possible safeguards for the city's milk supply.

Commission of Five.

The commission, as created in the ordinance, will be composed of five persons including two dairymen, one member of the Georgia Milk Producers' association, one physician and one member from the city at large.

It was, in substance, the same plan which a large group of dairymen attending a session of the ordinance committee last week had refused to indorse.

Dr. Duvall stated, however, that a substantial part of the organized dairymen and milk producers, as well as civic leaders interested in child health, had apprised him of their support for such a plan. He said that he believed it would make possible general agreement on some new method or methods for safeguarding milk from infection and impurities.

Increased Infant Mortality.

Dr. Duvall launched his fight for better milk after disclosure at the city health office, that infant mortality had increased greatly in Atlanta during 1923 and after investigation of the death reports indicated that digestive ailments in young babies, largely attributable to milk, had caused many of the deaths.

The original Duvall ordinance was drawn to require all milkmen to pasteurize milk before offering it for sale and to stamp on each bottle name of the concern which pasteurized it and date of pasteurization. Dairymen who delivered milk directly to the consumer were exempt from the requirement.

The ordinance drew the fire of small grocery proprietors and the dairymen and council referred it to the ordinance committee for hearing. After failing twice to obtain a quorum of the committee, Councilman Horace Russell, chairman, postponed action on the ordinance until September 11.

Alderman Duvall's action in proposing the milk commission as a substitute will prevent the pasteuriza-tion ordinance from coming definitely to a vote for a much longer period.
Until the commission has been appointed and makes a report on milk conditions and its attitude toward the ordinance.

Klan Made Issue In Race For Judgeship by Howard, L. F. McClelland Charges

EFFORT TO LIFT WATER MINIMUM OF CITY BLOCKED

Proposed Amendment to Ordinance Referred to Finance Committee After Hot Fight.

An effort to obtain an immediate increase in the "water minimum" through city council Monday afternoon failed when the body voted, 12 to 11, to refer the question to the finance committee.

Councilman Harry York, leader of the "irreconcilables" against the present water rate, introduced an amendment to the present ordinance, backed by Councilman John A. White and others, providing that 700 cubic feet of water, instead of 500 cubic feet
as at present, be charged at the minimum rate of $1.

Councilman J. J. Geer attacked the attempt at hasty action on the ground that it would seriously interfere with present plans for financing the schools and other departments, all based on the existing rate, and finally obtained adoption of a motion referring the York proposal to the finance committee.

Councilman James L. Wells opposed the move for summary action on the floor of council and moved that the question be referred to the chairman of the finance committee, whereupon Councilman York called attention of council to the fact that no one had been appointed as chairman in the place of Alderman J. R.
Bachman, who had resigned last week
at the request of Mayor Walter A.
Sims.

All members of council who participated in the debate declared themselves in favor of a lower water rate at the earliest possible moment but pleaded for careful consideration of any proposal that might upset the city's financial arrangements.

LATE CAMPAIGN CAUSES NO WORRY

Neither Democrats Nor Republicans Seem to Mind Nearness of Election Day.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, September 1.—No politician is able to remember a campaign condition like the present one.
The election comes only nine weeks
from Tuesday and the practically universal feeling is that the campaign has not begun yet. The republican politicians say this with satisfaction.
The democratic politicians admit it,
but appear to have no great concern about it.

The republicans are satisfied with the condition because they think that absence of activity and interest means that the republican administration will remain in power. As they visualize it, it is a case of Coolidge being in office and known, with Davis as well known, yet as he must be if there is to be a fairly even fight between the two. The republicans say they don't care how long that Chicago murder trial keeps the front pages. Certainly there is no precedent for a campaign in which, on the sixty-fifth day preceding the election, there are important newspapers in which the news of the campaign does not "make the first page."

Wait on Democrats.

Some especially hopeful republicans occasionally whisper a surmise that this sort of quiet keeps up the opposition to Coolidge for the election will take the same course as Hiram Johnson's opposition to Coolidge for the nomination. That, of course, is an extreme republican view. Most of the more substantial republican leaders expect there will be a hot campaign even yet, and that it will be all the better.

He was a past grand commander of Knights Templar of Georgia, and a member of the grand commander of America. Officers and members of the Georgia de Baille commandery, Athens will act as honorary escort.

30 AUTOS LADEN WITH ARMS SEEN

found that the night had brought no harm. The relief was so great, apparently, that no attention was paid to the resumed bombardment of charges and counter charges hurled by the Ku Klux Klan and the anti-klan, each accusing the other of starting Saturday's battle in which six men were killed and several injured.

Instead, great preparations were made for a fitting observance of the day dedicated to labor. And to the men of Williamson county, Labor day takes on unusual significance.

Most of them are coal miners and their lives seem centered on their work and its embodiment in the local unions.

Two Observances of Day.

This year labor gathered at Johnson City to pay and receive homage, while at Herrin, widows and children wept as their men were lowered into graves. The men had been miners, too. But they died from bullets, little lead pellets of death sent winging towards their victims because men did not agree with each other.

One man, Dewey Newbolt, died as he had fought, an avowed Ku Klux Klansman. He was a bachelor and was buried in the Newbolt cemetery, 23 miles from here. Chester Reid and Otto Rolland were innocent bystanders whose death increased the toll of the county's internecine strife.

Reid and his wife and six-month-old baby just happened by the Smith garage in his automobile when the shooting started. He slumped in the seat with several bullets in his body. As he died, he tried to put his baby between the gunfire and his baby, perhaps saving the child's life.

Going to Choose a Home.

"Why must we pay?" his wife asked. She was sitting in the parlor of her home, her child on her lap. Her eyes were dimmed with tears and with trembling lips she said that "Chester had nothing to do with either side. He worked hard for his and me. We were going over to look at a house. Somebody shot and he dropped dead at my side."

Otto Rolland's wife, dead but three children mourn his death.

Mrs. Reid's sentiments were echoed by the Rev. John Meeker, Presbyterian, who officiated at the funeral services.

In referring to the circumstances that led to Reid and Rolland's deaths, he spoke of the commandment "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

"We must cultivate a spirit of friendliness," he said.

"There is only one solution to the trouble this community has suffered for so long and that is that we abide by the first and second commandments."

Bury Sheriff's Today.

Tomorrow the other victims will be buried. They are Deputy Sheriff J. H. "Bud" Allison, Green Dunning and Charles Willard.

While the miners were marching at Johnson City and the mourners grouped about the graves of the dead slain, the war of Williamson county continued.

The Ku Klux Klan sought to obtain murder warrants against their anti-klan opponents.

The sheriff, George Galligan, was arrested charged with murder as were his deputy, Ora Thomas, Norman McClintock, and Carl Manning. They are charged with having killed the three klansmen in Saturday's clash. They were released on $1,000 bonds. Murder warrants also were said to be out against the state's attorney, Delos Duty, and Herrin's city judge, E. N. Bowen.

Troops to Leave Today.

The anti's already have arrested nine men and are moving them from jail in an effort to thwart a delivery.

The other two victims of the shooting meanwhile are in hospitals. Herrin, Phemister, part of his head shot away with just a chance to live. Harry Herrin, previously thought not to have been seriously hurt, was taken under a guard of soldiers to a hospital at West Frankfort, with concussion of the brain. He was hit with a revolver butt Saturday.

Adjutant General Carlos Black said there was no further evidence of lawlessness and that the troops brought here will leave Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Galligan replied that if the soldiers do he would disclaim responsibility.

CHIEF WALKER LAYS BLAME ON SHERIFF.

Herrin, Ill., September 1.—Police Chief A. M. Walker in a signed statement issued today asserted that Sheriff George Galligan and his "gunmen" precipitated the clash last Saturday in which six men were killed.

"When the Herrin city court convened on August 18," the statement said, Sheriff Galligan deputized 150 gunmen, made up from former lawbreakers of Williamson county, aided by many from East St. Louis, who, acting as special deputies, commenced a reign of terror in the city of Herrin. Men were openly intimidated, driven from the streets and denied the admission of the courtroom. Witnesses were threatened and forced at gun point to give testimony which would in any way incriminate any of his gunmen who were indicted by the special grand jury and whom were then and are now acting as his special deputies.

Claims Intimidation.

"Witnesses were also forced to refrain from giving evidence that would disprove the guilt of persons whom he had charged with violating the law while serving warrants in wholesale liquor raids of December 22 and January 2.

"Upon the arrival of 150 deputies armed with machine guns, high-powered rifles, shotguns, grenades and other weapons of warfare, the people of our city became alarmed because of the character of deputies in Williamson county."

"Whereupon, in this situation, the best citizens, business men and politicians, numbering more than 100, sent Governor Smith a telegram asking that we have some measure of protection, or at least an investigation of conditions, which the governor saw fit to deny us as citizens of the great state of Illinois."

"The citizens of our city who respect the law were ordered by the heads of the law and order league to stay off the streets as much as possible and refrain from going about the city hall, because of a seeming desire of Sheriff Galligan's gunmen to start trouble."

"This was very successful, but trouble could not be averted, for when the court was adjourned, Sheriff Galligan, Bud Allison, Ora Thomas, the Shelton boys, Skelcher, Briggs, Chester Reid and others went to a garage owned by J. H. Smith and asked where the K. K. K. was. They wanted to kill him. (It is presumed they meant Smith, owner of the garage)."

"Being told he was out, they ordered a man in the garage to roll out the car that had been used in the attack on S. Glenn Young. Dave Sisk was slow in getting the car out and Ora Thomas struck him with a revolver."

"They asked him (Sisk) who the K. K. K. was. He was Herrin and when he stated he did not know, he was beaten and kicked again."

Threatened Death.

"Ora Thomas and Sheriff Galligan then placed their guns against his chest and said they would kill him anyhow for hanging around such a dive."

"Ora Thomas said, as some of the other deputies with him started to leave the garage, 'Any man of my gang that leaves me will be killed.'"

"Chester Reid stepped back to the door and said, 'Boys, let's not do that,' whereupon Thomas, leveling his gun upon him, said 'Kill the ———'."

Ora Thomas and Sheriff Galligan then fired shots and Reid was killed. Here is a K. K. K. and struck him, fracturing his skull. Others kicked and stamped him.

Charles Denham, a merchant and alderman, happened to be passing on his way to his place of business with three men who asked to ride home with him. Ora Thomas remarked, 'There goes that ——— Denham, kill him.'"

"They then ran to his car, shooting at him. Green Dunning jumped out of the car and closed with the Shelton boys. The latter grappled with him and shot him. Dewey Newbolt was shot as he sat in Denham's car. Charles Willard was shot by Ora Thomas or Sheriff Galligan just as Willard shot and killed Bud Allison, who was trying to hit Denham on the head with a revolver."

"After Dunning was shot he got out of the machine and walked to a grape arbor across the street, where he fell on his back. There Ora Thomas shot him again."

"City Judge E. N. Bowen and State's Attorney Delos Duty passed at this time, also shooting into the car, while Dr. J. T. Black came from the opposite direction, shooting into the car."

"When people started running toward the scene, Sheriff Galligan and his deputies took their machine guns and other weapons and ran to the Herrin hospital."

When told of Chief Walker's statement, Dr. Black denied that he had anything to do with the shooting.

CONTINUE PRESENT LABOR CONDITIONS

sign government. We had better stick to the American brand of government, the American brand of equality and the American brand of wages. America had better stay American."

"We have outlawed all artificial privilege. We have had our revolution and reforms. I do not favor a cooperative government. I am for a common sense government by all the people, according to the American policy and under the American constitution."

Turning to a discussion of his views on labor, he asserted the right of wage earners to organize, bargain collectively and negotiate through their own agents had been determined by the people, according to the American policy and under the American constitution."

Referring obviously to the railroad labor board, he called attention to the fact that "we have been making an interesting experiment in relation to railroad labor" and expressed the opinion that "it could probably be modified, through mutual agreement, to the benefit of all concerned."

In private employment he continued, the right to strike goes along with the right to organize. Likewise, he said, the principle of voluntary arbitration is recognized, "but compulsory arbitration, to my mind, cannot be reconciled with the right of individual freedom."

Restriction of immigration and enactment of tariff laws are necessary to preserve American standards for wage earners, the president added, declaring that the present administration had sponsored such legislation. Government economy, he said, also is necessary, as is the establishment of peaceful conditions which will permit of protection at a minimum cost, but by an adequate army and navy."

Instead of permitting the period of deflation, which followed the war, to be used "to secure a reduction in wages and the dissolution of labor organizations," he said, the administration adopted a policy of "healthfulness to business, industry and labor."

"The federal reserve system," he related, "has constantly reduced discount rates, business has revived and the millions who were without employment have found plenty of work at an increasing rate of wages. It is my belief that this policy represents one of the most important and helpful services on the part of the United States government since the war."

"I want to encourage business, to perform for the benefit of the wage earners of this nation. When almost everything went crashing down, a change of front took place in time to save them from almost certain destruction."

More Humane Institutions.

"I want to see our institutions more and more humane, but I do not want any other time of the history crying applicants for the favor of the government, when they should all be independent masters of their own destiny. I want to encourage business, that it may provide profitable employment. I want to see jobs hunting for men, rather than men hunting for jobs. I want every individual, no matter how humble, to know that every hand that is put to the plow will be steadily and surely laid. Whether he shall enter upon it, depends upon the attitude of our fellow countrymen. I have an abiding faith in the American people."

"One of the outstanding features of the present day is that American wage earners are living better than ever. I want every individual to have not only retained, but actually increased the gains they made during the war. The cost of living has been high, but the increase of wages has been greater. Compilations of the department of labor demonstrate that the wages of an hour of a day, buy more now than it ever did before."

Hours Are Shortened.

"All this has been accomplished in spite of a general shortening of the hours of labor in the industries. The cost of the iron and steel and the box board industry are particularly notable in this regard. As a direct result of President Harding's initiative, the iron and steel manufacturers were brought together and an agreement was reached under which the 12-hour day and the seven-day week have been eliminated. Secretary Davis did the same for the box board workers."

"Yet this has been done without any loss in wages. On the other hand, there has been actual gain."

"But increased wages, in terms of money, mean little if they are entirely absorbed by higher prices of the necessities of life. In order to know whether an increase in the money wage is also an increase in the real wage, we must know how much the prices have advanced. On that point, I find that the cost of living of the average family, for the same standard of living, has been falling since the high point was reached in 1920 and is now, in terms of money, only 60 per cent above the level of 1913. That is, the increase in wages has far out-run the advance in the cost of living. Business which would be of no value to the worker, but which are higher today than ever before in our history."

Child Labor Efforts.

"These are some of the material results of the present American policies. We have enacted many laws to protect the health of those who are employed in the industries. Special efforts have been made in this direction in behalf of women and children. We are attempting at the present time to secure a constitutional amendment giving even jurisdiction over child labor. The efforts of the states and nation to provide and encourage education have been such that it is fair to claim that any youth, no matter how humble his circumstances, can, unaided, secure a college education by the exercise of his own efforts. We have achieved an equality of opportunity which has opened up the avenues of a more abundant life to all the people."

There are two sides to every bargain. It is not only human nature, but necessary to progress, that each side should desire to secure a good trade. This is the case in contract employment. In order to give wage earners reasonable advantages their right has been established to organize, to bargain collectively and to negotiate through their own chosen agents."

"The principle, also, of voluntary arbitration has come to exist almost as a right. Compulsory arbitration has sometimes been proposed, but to my mind it cannot be reconciled with the right of individual freedom. Along with the right to organize goes the right to strike, which is recognized in all private employment. The establishment of all these principles has, no doubt, been productive of industrial peace, which we are at the present time enjoying to a most unusual degree. This has been brought about by the general recognition that, on the whole, labor leaders are square and, on the whole, employers intend to be fair. When this is the case, mutual conference is the best method of adjusting differences in private industry. Of course, employment affecting public safety or public necessity is not private employment and requires somewhat different treatment. In this field, we have been making an interesting experiment in relation to railroad labor. This has, no doubt, been a step in advance. It could probably be modified through mutual agreement to the benefit of all concerned."

Becoming Capital Power.

"As a result of all these fortunate circumstances, organized labor is fast becoming one of the powers of capital in this country. Its cooperative enterprises and its entrance into the field of banking and investment have given it not only a new power of influence, but a new point of view. It is learning the problems of enterprise and management by actual experience. This again is the working out of the American ideal in industry. It is the beginning of a more complete economic equality among all the people. I believe it to be the beginning of an era of better understanding, more sympathy and more fellowship, among those who serve the community through investment and management and those who serve as wage earners. We have yet a long way to go, but progress has begun and the way lies open to be a more complete understanding that will mark the end of industrial strife."

"It is my policy to continue these conditions as far as it is possible and to continue this march of progress. There are two important domestic factors in this situation. One is restrictive immigration. This has been adopted by this administration, chiefly for the purpose of maintaining American standards. It undoubtedly has a very great economic effect. We want the people who live in America, no matter what their origin, to be able to continue in the enjoyment of their present unprecedented advantages. This opportunity would certainly be destroyed by the tremendous influx of foreign peoples, if immigration were not restricted."

Favors Protective Tariff.

"The second important factor is that of a tariff for protection. I have already given you some examples of the wages paid in Europe. Such a scale means that goods can be produced much cheaper there than they can here. If our policy of protection is to be abandoned, the goods which are made by wage earners in America will be made by the wage earners of Europe. Our own people will be out of employment. Our entire business system will be thrown into confusion with the war, and mis-employment have found plenty of work at an increasing rate of wages. It is my belief that this policy represents one of the most important and helpful services on the part of the United States government since the war."

TYNER'S
DYSPEPSIA REMEDY

Montana, on Boston Common today opened his campaign as vice presidential candidate on the La Follette ticket.

Again and again he criticised President Coolidge whom he termed the "mythically strong, courageous, silent, watchful man who occupies the presidential chair," and attacked satirically Charles G. Dawes, the republican vice presidential nominee, for "his gallant service in war on organized labor," while he referred to John W. Davis, democratic standard bearer, as "a man who would be willing, it seems, to out-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of Wall street."

For himself, Senator Wheeler said he would welcome a classification as radical, to help the revolt against "living under the dictatorship of a small class that controls the financial resources of the country." He asserted the only issue of the day was that of returning the government to the representatives of the people for, he added, the two old parties, "in everything but name, are now as like as the gold dust twins" in their subservience to control of a single dominant power of financial, industrial and commercial interests, centering in Wall street.

Cites Committee Record.

For ammunition to support his attack, the Montana senator depended much upon the record of the senatorial committee which investigated the official conduct of former Attorney General Daugherty, most of which was brought out by himself as prosecutor. Corruption in government, which he said had been exposed, he treated as an inevitable result of "financial control."

Declaring that the republican and democratic parties have long since ceased to "represent distinct lines of economic thought and interest," the candidate continued:

"They have fallen under control of a single dominant power which uses them to further its own interests. Instead of a government of the people, by the people, for the people, we have a government of Wall street, by Wall street, for Wall street. I use the term Wall street to designate the industrial and commercial interests centering in that crooked line in lower New York city.

Both Parties Failed.

"A chance presented itself this summer to break this strangle-hold which big business has obtained on government, a chance for the nomination of a man by one or the other of the two parties who would place the common good above the will of Wall street."

"This opportunity was not embraced, of course, by the representatives of the predatory class who met at Cleveland in June. They nominated Calvin Coolidge. We all hoped the democratic convention would accept this open challenge to the people, but in this hope and this belief the subtle power of Wall street was underestimated."

"The democratic convention brought forth for its presidential candidate a man who would out-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of the people, a man who would be willing, it seems, to out-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of Wall street. Corrupt as the republican party is, controlled by big business as it is, even it would not have dared to go to the very heart of Wall street and flaunt in the face of the American people the attorney for the Morgan interests and the Standard Oil company."

No Choice Between Them.

"No, the long-suffering people must listen to aimless discussion as to which is the more reactionary, Coolidge or Davis. Between them there is, of course, no choice. Behind the curtains of both parties sit the financial autocrats and say: 'Quarrel it out among yourselves—whichever side of you loses, we of Wall street win.'"

"Party government at this moment of our history is a myth. We are living under the dictatorship of a small class that controls the financial resources of the country."

"There is but one issue before the country today. It is: Shall the control of the government be left in the hands of a small group that has cornered the national wealth and exploited the people? Or shall the control of the government be returned to the representatives of the people to be administered in the interest of the masses, to be so administered that the right of every man, woman and child to food and clothing and shelter and health and happiness is placed above the rights and the claims of fight and profit?"

Ridicules General Dawes.

"General Dawes (I use the title general in memory of his gallant service as commander of the 'minute men' in his war on organized labor), says the issue is conservatism vs. radicalism. He attempted to picture Coolidge and Dawes as representing conservatism and La Follette and Wheeler as representing radicalism."

"The general, bluff soldier that he is, finds no issue between his party and the democratic party and names none. He could tell the truth by explaining that in the word conservatism is hiding big business, representing less than 5 per cent of our population, who want things to go on as they are and, if he could tell the truth, by further explaining that by radicalism is meant the desire for a change for the better on the part of the great mass of the people who produce the wealth of the nation. He would have you believe that all those who desire that the people, and not Wall street shall rule, are radicals. We will meet him on this day by day until it shall finally be settled at the polls next November by the people themselves."

Most Problems Economic.

"Most of our political problems, in fact, are economic problems. What except an economic issue is at the bottom of the spectacle of corruption at Washington, which has shocked the people of the country the past few years? This corruption in the executive branches of the government is not a simple matter of individual dishonesty, but is a natural outgrowth of the system by which presidents and vice presidents of the United States have come to be nominated."

"In all my studies of political history I cannot recall an administration more corrupt, more destructive of the rights of the people than the administration of the republican party during the last three and one-half years. We need not go beyond the records. There is Albert B. Fall, Edwin Denby and Harry M. Daugherty, driven from the cabinet by an outraged public sentiment. I ask you, Mr. Coolidge, to explain to the people of your own state, if you can, why Fall and Dawes and Daugherty were allowed to go scot free."

"As a matter of fact, the guilty are not being prosecuted and will not be prosecuted as long as the Daugherty spirit remains in control of the department of justice. Mr. Coolidge says the law will be enforced. Judging the future by the past, they also know the law will not be enforced against those within the inner circle as long as the republican machine controls the administration of justice."

Time to Create New Party.

"The time has come in the life of this nation when it is necessary to create a new party, because the patience of the people is worn out with the broken pledges of the two old parties—broken pledges that strew the political plains of this republic as corpses strewn the battlefields of the Vosges."

"The facts regarding the corruption that was brought out by the investigating committee were generally known in Washington, and yet this unspeaking, mythical man, who sits silent in the presidential chair while reading the debates in the senate concerning the corruption in official Washington and the misuse of the department of justice as vice president, and then, as chief executive of the United States, stood by and allowed all these things to go on without a lift of an eyebrow."

"True to his master's command, President Coolidge went to Wall street for a successor to the recent attorney general and finally, to express his contempt of public sentiment and common decency he let in in the department of justice the same men who had so ably assisted Daugherty in his efforts to protect the corrupt interests that have been looting his country."

Calls Upon Coolidge.

"President Coolidge is a candidate for president of the United States. He has a record and must be judged by that record. Mr. Coolidge, you are before the bar of public judgment. Stand up and answer for the deeds of omission. Knowing Mr. Daugherty as you did, why was it necessary for the legislative branch of the government to expose the corruption in the department of justice before you would take a step to remove him from office? Why, Mr. Coolidge, do you still keep in the department of justice those men who worked hand in hand with Daugherty in protecting crime and criminals? I ask these things, Mr. Coolidge, I ask them in the name of common sense."

"This is labor's day. I have reason to believe that this audience is largely composed of workers. But I have endeavored to appeal to you today, not as a class within the American body politic, with special wishes and special needs, but as average citizens who seek only a square deal. Today I have tried simply to indicate that so long as our political parties are controlled entirely by the financial interests, we must expect corruption in the national government. This constitutes a condition that cannot be cured by silence in the white house, but silence is all that issues from the white house."

T. K. GLENN IS HOST AT GREAT BARBECUE

Directors, officers and employees of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank were guests Monday of T. K. Glenn, president of that institution, at an elaborate barbecue on his farm several miles from Atlanta. More than two hundred—including a number of specially invited guests—enjoyed the far famed hospitality of Mr. Glenn.

The barbecue was served at 2 o'clock in the beautiful setting offered on the spacious Glenn farm. Robert Maddox, chairman of the board of directors, acted as toastmaster, and a number of impromptu speeches were made by bank officials and guests. Mr. Glenn opened the festivities with a short talk.

After the "Ode" was brought to an end, members of the party enjoyed dancing and swimming, returned to the city in the late afternoon.

hotter for being belated and concentrated. It is for this that the republicans are holding themselves in readiness. They take the view that it is not up to them to see the race, that they are in power and that all they need to do is to meet the fight adequately when it comes. For the present, the republicans have got their organization into good shape and are carrying on with fair effectiveness all the usual sort of things in the way of publicity and the like. But they have not yet taken any step in the nature of taking notice of the democratic offensive. They say they're ready to do this and will do so whenever the democratic offensive develops sufficient momentum.

The democrats claim to be unconcerned about the lateness of the beginning of the campaign. When asked when it will really get under way, they reply that the beginning will be made with Davis' western trip this week and the two weeks following. They admit the opening has been delayed and lay the blame on the Ku Klux Klan issue. To begin with, the activities centered around the Klan issue in various states have absorbed public attention and made it difficult to interest the public in other issues. Further than that, Davis' own speech, the first he made after both he and Coolidge had made their formal acceptances, might have been the opening the campaign but for one incident, it was at the close of that speech that Davis added a kind of postscript in which he denounced the Klan "by name." That interjected paragraph, because of all the circumstances, was the part of the speech that caught public attention and obscured the rest. The Klan immediately got the headlines and nearly ever since has distracted public attention.

But Shot Was Important.

The democrats say, and most observers agree with them, that that New Jersey speech of Davis was a high level of political discussion and might have provided the opening for a fine campaign, but for the distraction attending the mention of the Klan. Fully half, probably more than half, the democratic leaders feel that Davis would have done better to keep his speech at the high level that ignored the Klan, and to leave the Klan to enjoy obscurity. To this, the answer is made that some of the most ardent democratic leaders in New York and the east were in a state of mind such that there would have been no possibility of Davis carrying New Jersey unless he yielded to the insistence that he mention the Klan "by name."

The democrats feel that Davis has now set the standard that was indispensable to any chance of winning in New York and the east. With this behind him, they say he will, on his western tour, not only make his appeal to the west, but also open his real campaign before the country as a whole.

from city funds to put through an emergency grading project on the Roswella street side of the new high school girls.

Because of the steepness of the hill on which the school is being built, heavy rains, like the one Monday, wash heavily against the first floor and basement, at times threatening to flood through the windows. A strip ten feet wide is to be excavated on three sides of the structure to divert the flood water.

The board of education had been called upon last week for an emergency appropriation to do the grading, but had deferred action until Dr. R. M. Eubanks and other members of the purchasing committee could have opportunity to see the first floor and basement, at times threatening to flood through the windows. A strip ten feet wide is to be excavated on three sides of the structure to divert the flood water.

RAIL LABOR BOARD AEOLITION URGED

railroad labor board and second, that such boards, instead of being fixed in their personnel, should be filled by appointments made from time to time as the controversies arise.

Must Have Public Confidence. Taking cognizance of a question often raised with regard to the railroad labor board, the democratic nominee declared that whether legal machinery exists to compel the submission of labor disputes to such a board, or whether its decision could be enforced, were of minor importance. He said the board itself enjoyed the confidence of the parties to the dispute, and if it realized that its chief function was to encourage a spirit of cooperation and friendship between employer and employee.

Mr. Davis' statement with regard to settlement of labor disputes came in the course of a general exposition of his views regarding labor. He announced at the outset that he did not intend to make a political speech, but his audience generously laughed and applauded when he made several veiled thrusts at his opponents in the presidential race. There also was liberal applauding as the candidate concluded with a call to the laboring men and women of America to lead their countrymen in a movement to have "America take her rightful place on the councils of humanity," and to see "that she becomes the first among the nations in the service of mankind."

"Those who counsel isolation in any kind of government policy—policy toward foreign affairs," Mr. Davis said, "are blind leaders of the blind. We shall have world peace and world disarmament if we are willing to work for it, to struggle for it, to risk for it. I have great sympathy with the slogan 'America First,' but I want to make my own definition of it."

Three Great Duties. Mr. Davis told his audience that there were three great constructive duties before the American people if labor is to hold the ground it has gained. The first is to make it clear to the nation that it is only one way of saying that if America is to remain American, these he enumerated are, preservation of the equality of opportunity and making the nation secure against any tendency to harden into a system of caste.

Preservation of the equality of right, with laws so framed and so applied as to leave all men every liberty consistent with the equal liberties of others.

Adaptation of the political and commercial policies to the new conditions in the modern world, so as to make the nation secure against war or the threat of war.

Declaring that the key to the door of opportunity is education, Mr. Davis was applauded when he announced that the public school system must be strengthened. He also declared that the nation must not rest on the fatal path of a state monopoly of education.

The door to equal opportunity through education having been opened, the speaker declared that the country must see to it that it is not closed by human greed and that so the child labor constitutional amendment could be made effective.

Laws should be just and equal. Mr.

Davis went on, but it must be seen that they do not evade those natural rights which neither congress nor legislatures, presidents nor governors, courts nor commissions may rightfully restrict. Freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of labor, freedom of contract, freedom of the press, and freedom of religious belief and practices.

Thrusts at Opponents.

Here Mr. Davis took a thrust at his political opponents. "I do not envy the frame of mind," he said, "which causes some men, even some who are candidates for high offices, to charge all who disagree with them with plotting the destruction of the republic. To judge from some recent utterances, there are those in this country who see a conspiracy whenever three workmen meet together, a riot when their numbers grow to ten, and a revolution if it reaches a hundred."

The democratic nominee's first indirect reference to the policies of Robert M. La Follette, the independent presidential candidate, came with a declaration that he would support a liberty that is above and beyond all governmental control, and could not sympathize with those who "would give to congress and to legislatures, or even to a popular majority, the power to do whatever they might see fit."

"There is no such thing in America as government at discretion," he said. "It is not the wrong need protection against unjust and unjust laws, but the wrong need protection against the encroachments of power; it is the weak and the despotic of the many is free and open debate. I prefer liberty with all its perils, including the liberty to make mistakes, to any system by which the government seeks to set itself up as the universal shepherd of us all."

Hits Injunctions Again.

Here the nominee again declared against the use of injunction in labor disputes, as he did at Clarksville in his acceptance address, and he added that if legislation already passed providing against such use is not sufficient guidance in this matter, he would write it in plainer terms. He added that, on the ground of too wide a use of the injunction against labor, it had been caused to make complaint against the judicial power.

Mr. Davis spoke at the Wheeling Park from a stand at the foot of a hill, where several thousand people were gathered. He was in excellent health and in excellent spirits. He left for Chicago, the second stop on his western tour, after a brief stay in Wheeling. In crossing the panhandle section of his native state, Mr. Davis made half a dozen rear platform addresses to the throngs of people who gathered at nearly a dozen stations en route.

Speech Non-Political.

At the outset of his address Mr. Davis said he would not make a political speech.

"We meet as Americans on an American holiday," he said, "and we are for the moment to forget political parties and the issues that divide them and speak of things concerning which all true Americans should agree."

Reviewing them, briefly, the struggles of labor against "the forces of human greed and avarice" to come to its present position, Mr. Davis said: "If labor is to hold the ground that it has gained, which is another way of saying that if America is to remain American, there are three great constructive duties before the American people."

"The first is to preserve equality of opportunity and make the nation secure against any tendency to harden into a system of caste. We do not want men and women in this country to remain fixed to the stations which their fathers occupied. We wish all fathers and all mothers to nurse the hope that their children may lead happier and broader lives than they themselves have known."

Preserve Equality of Right. "The second duty is to so arrange and so administer our government as to preserve equality of right. Whether we are dealing with the tariff, with taxation, with finance, with the railroad, with agriculture, with industry or whatsoever, we must make sure that there is no discrimination in our laws either for or against the farm or the factory, the countryside or the east or the west. All our laws must be so framed and so applied as to leave all men every liberty which is consistent with the equal liberty of others. This was founded as the land of freedom. We must keep it so."

"And, in the third place, we must make the nation secure against war or the threat of war by adapting our political and commercial policies to the new conditions that exist in the modern world."

"The key to the door of equal opportunity is education. Now and again a misguided voice is raised to suggest that we may become over-educated. The theory seems to be that if we educate the brain, there will be no one left to do the labor of the hand. It is the same 'mud-sill' theory which Abraham Lincoln denounced."

Against Federal Control.

"We must not enter the fatal path of a state monopoly of education, nor should we load up on an already overburdened government at Washington the educational duties which properly belong to the states and cities and local communities. But we must sustain, support and strengthen in every way our indispensable system of public schools so that every child may be assured of an education, and of such an education as will fit him not only to earn his living, but also to live. We must resist every tendency to let the education of children of any class merely to the manufacturers of hands for industry and every tendency to produce a standardized American. It is the business of the schools to turn out free citizens of the republic, and not merely docile human machines."

"And if we open wide by education the door of opportunity to the child, we owe it to him to see that human greed does not close it again. It is a blot upon our good name that child labor should be permitted anywhere in the United States to dwarf the minds and bodies of the future citizens of the republic. To stunt the growth of a child in his most critical years; to rob him of his opportunities for education and to make of him a juvenile drudge for mere purposes of profit is a crime against the future of the race."

Favors Federal Law.

"Of course the several states can and they should prevent this thing. I would not wish that power taken from them. When congress has passed, in 1916, its first child labor law, however, it became my duty as solicitor general to argue in its favor before the supreme court of the United States. I urged in its behalf that unless a uniform standard was adopted throughout the United States, the states that wished to legislate against child labor would be at a disadvantage because of the economic disadvantages they would suffer in competition with their less progressive neighbors. I call attention to the fact that the like reasons more than one international conference had been called to bring about equality among the nations on similar subjects."

"The reason which I put forward in support of the law of 1916 seem to me still to obtain and lead me now to favor the ratification of the pending child labor amendment. Responsibility for decision on the subject now rests with the states themselves, but were I a member of a state legislature, my vote would be cast to ratify the amendment."

"Equality of opportunity, however, is an empty phrase unless all men are left free to grasp it. Not only must such cases arise, it should leave adult citizens to make their own contracts in their own way as to the terms and conditions on which their labor is to be performed.

"If government can fix the limit of a day's work in ordinary industrial and commercial pursuits, it can, at its own discretion, make those limits long or short. It should attempt to do neither, but leave the parties to all such contracts to bargain with each other in manner as they see fit. It is only when contracts rest upon consent that those who make them are bound in morals to their observance. When labor bargains on equal terms with its employer, both parties to the contract owe it to themselves and owe it to society to keep and perform with scrupulous honesty the contracts they have made."

Settlement of Disputes.

"While I believe employer and employee should be left to bargain with each other in manner as they see fit, it must not be forgotten that violent disputes between them are not only the source of great loss to both, but also a constant menace to the industry and commerce of the country. In view of these facts, it is the duty of the government to lend its aid and encouragement in every possible way to settle such disputes. It should provide machinery through which there may be fair and calm discussion of the subject of dispute by both employer and employee; mediation, if necessary, by nonprejudiced persons, and thorough going publicity of all the facts."

Right of Free Contract.

"Not the least of these natural rights is the right of free contract. Towards grown men and women, responsible citizens of the republic, we cannot and we should not take a paternalistic and protective attitude. It is the duty of the government to be an employer to fix by statute the hours of labor of those whom it employs. It is proper and right and that it should pass factory laws to protect the health and safety of those who work. Where it undertakes to regulate a business such as transportation, it cannot ignore the conditions that surround the labor engaged in that industry. It must defend the future citizenship of the nation by restrictions of child labor, and it must be quick to recognize the duties of maternity care upon women, it may exercise a special care for those who are or are to become the mothers of the race. But

rules of law, but deal with human nature.

Rewrite Labor Provisions.

"Whether or not legal authority exists to compel the submission of labor disputes to such a board, or whether or not the decisions of any such board may be enforced, is of minor consequence, if the board itself enjoys the confidence of the parties to the dispute, and if it realizes that its chief function is to encourage a spirit of cooperation and friendship between employer and employee."

"It is in the light of those principles and of our accumulated experience that we should rewrite the provisions of the Esch-Cummins transportation act that deal with the settlement of labor disputes."

"It is because I believe in a liberty that is above and beyond all governmental control that I cannot sympathize with those who would give to congress and to legislatures, or even to a popular majority, the power to do whatever they might see fit. There is no such thing in America as government at discretion. It is not the wrong need protection against unjust and unjust laws, but the wrong need protection against the encroachments of power; it is the weak and the despotic of the many is free and open debate. I prefer liberty with all its perils, including the liberty to make mistakes, to any system by which the government seeks to set itself up as the universal shepherd of us all."

"Two things seem to me to be fundamental in setting up such machinery. Of these, the first is that the machinery should be created, should consist of representatives of the employers on the one hand and representatives of the particular craft concerned on the other. The second is that it is better in every way that boards of adjustment or boards of investigation and review, instead of being fixed in their personnel, should be filled by appointments made from time to time as the controversies arise. Nothing is more difficult than the experience has taught us, than for a permanent board to retain the confidence of employer and employee. Each decision it is called upon to make exposes it to the charge of having unduly favored one side or the other and is pointed to as a precedent when subsequent decisions are made. Human nature is quick to charge other men with preconceived opinions and labor disputes deal not with fixed

rules of law, but deal with human nature.

Human nature is quick to charge other men with preconceived opinions and labor disputes deal not with fixed

rules of law, but deal with human nature.

"Whether or not legal authority exists to compel the submission of labor disputes to such a board, or whether or not the decisions of any such board may be enforced, is of minor consequence, if the board itself enjoys the confidence of the parties to the dispute, and if it realizes that its chief function is to encourage a spirit of cooperation and friendship between employer and employee."

"It is in the light of those principles and of our accumulated experience that we should rewrite the provisions of the Esch-Cummins transportation act that deal with the settlement of labor disputes."

"It is because I believe in a liberty that is above and beyond all governmental control that I cannot sympathize with those who would give to congress and to legislatures, or even to a popular majority, the power to do whatever they might see fit. There is no such thing in America as government at discretion. It is not the wrong need protection against unjust and unjust laws, but the wrong need protection against the encroachments of power; it is the weak and the despotic of the many is free and open debate. I prefer liberty with all its perils, including the liberty to make mistakes, to any system by which the government seeks to set itself up as the universal shepherd of us all."

"Two things seem to me to be fundamental in setting up such machinery. Of these, the first is that the machinery should be created, should consist of representatives of the employers on the one hand and representatives of the particular craft concerned on the other. The second is that it is better in every way that boards of adjustment or boards of investigation and review, instead of being fixed in their personnel, should be filled by appointments made from time to time as the controversies arise. Nothing is more difficult than the experience has taught us, than for a permanent board to retain the confidence of employer and employee. Each decision it is called upon to make exposes it to the charge of having unduly favored one side or the other and is pointed to as a precedent when subsequent decisions are made. unity to take part in framing and defending legislation intended to correct these evils, to limit to its proper functions the writ of injunction and to give the right of trial by jury to those who are charged with criminal contempt. I believed then as I believe now the human legislation demanded. If the legislation already passed is not sufficient guidance in this matter, we must write it in plainer terms."

HARDWICK ASKED TO AID DEMOCRATS IN NEW ENGLAND

Thomas W. Hardwick, candidate for United States senator from Georgia, has been requested to make a series of speeches in Maine in support of the democratic presidential ticket, it was announced Monday at his headquarters here. He was compelled to decline an invitation to speak in Portland, Maine, on September 6, because of his senatorial campaign in Georgia, he said. Macon supporters of Mr. Hardwick have called off a speaking engagement in that city on September 6 because Senator William J. Harris had declined to engage in a joint debate, which was part of the program, it was announced also.

GERMANS CELEBRATE TANNENBERG VICTORY

Allenstein, East Prussia, Sept. 1.—The tenth anniversary of the battle of Tannenberg was observed today by 20,000 German veterans in the presence of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg who led the army in the German victory; General Ludendorff and Field Marshal Von Mackensen. The government was represented by Major General Von Gersdorff, commander-in-chief of the reichswehr. The unveiling of a monument as a memorial of the battle was the chief feature of the ceremonies.

City's Early Days Recalled By Mrs. Crumbley's Death

Mrs. Lizzie McGarity Crumbley, pioneer Carroll county resident who died recently, and her foster son, M. J. Brook, of East Point. In the recent death of Mrs. Lizzie McGarity Crumbley, at her home in Whitehall street, consisted of a wooded road, one store serving the same territory which now requires numerous great establishments. Mrs. Crumbley, who would have been 88 years old had she lived until November, had resided in Georgia all her life. Born in DeKalb county, near where Lakewood park is now located, she moved to Carroll county with her parents when 12 years old. Her parents settled near the Little Tallapoosa river, and she made her home there until her marriage to Samuel J. Crumbley in 1876. Soon after their marriage, Mr. Crumbley purchased land in the forest about five miles from his wife's father's plantation, and with the help of Mrs. Crumbley, set about clearing a farm and building a home.

only one small building, known as White Hall. The building, which was used as a drug store by Dr. Humphries, derived its name from the fact that was the only painted building in the county. Mrs. Crumbley visited the city again in 1890, and 56 years later returned for another visit in 1916. She was last here in 1920 and 1921.

Was Active Church Worker.

Mrs. Crumbley was a devout Bible student and had been a member of the Methodist church since a young girl, and of the Truist Methodist church for more than 45 years.

In addition to Mrs. Copeland, she is survived by a granddaughter, Mrs. Alice Jones, of Atlanta; a brother, S. J. McGarity, who still resides on the farm in Carroll county where he was born 72 years ago, and a sister, Mrs. Eliza Morris, who is 74 years old, and lives only six miles from the Crumbley home.

She was laid to rest beside her husband in Pleasant Grove cemetery, near Bowden. Many of those attending the funeral were of the older generation, who had known Mrs. Crumbley since before Bowden was established.

ATLANTES TRY NEW 'GET TOGETHER' PLAN

HOLD INQUEST TODAY IN DEATH OF FARMER

A coroner's inquest into the death, Monday, of Joseph Strickland, 35, a farmer on the Adamsville road, will be held some time Tuesday over the body at the chapel of Harry G. Pool.

SCHOOL TEACHERS TO REPORT TODAY

All white school teachers are to report at 8 o'clock this morning at the buildings to which they have been assigned to dispose of preliminary details incident to opening of Atlanta public schools September 8.

The heaviest registration in the city's history for opening of schools already had been recorded Monday at the census and attendance bureau on the fourth floor of city hall, where a staff of registrars is to begin this morning the final week of pre-school registration for the year.

City physicians have been assigned to duty on the third floor of city hall to vaccinate all white children from 9 to 11 and 2 to 4 o'clock while other physicians will vaccinate negro children in a special operating room on the fifth floor, reached by way of the back stairs, between 8:30 and 9:30 o'clock each morning.

COOPERATE OR LOSE!

The necessity for full cooperation

among the states touching the southern Appalachian range of mountains, with regard to the movement of the government to establish a national park in this range, has been very forcibly brought out by former United States Senator Butler, of North Carolina, in a statement recently issued by him from Washington.

The most significant feature,

perhaps, is that Senator Butler issued his statement immediately following an interview with Secretary

Work, of the interior department, and while he does not say that he reflects sentiments expressed by the secretary there is no doubt such is the case.

Says Senator Butler, as quoted by

H. F. C. Bryant in the Asheville

Citizen:

"I am glad to state further that

Secretary Work will welcome the appointment of a park commission by

North Carolina or any other state to cooperate with him and his commis-

tee. He said to me this morning that he was glad that I made it plain in my interview that congress has never yet appropriated any money to buy land for any of the national parks already established and therefore would be loath to depart from that policy unless a spirit of cooperation

was shown by some lands being de-donated and other lands secured on options at reasonable prices. And he added that this was a very proper and helpful function which could be performed by such a commission. Besides, he recognized the fact that such a commission appointed by our state could be very helpful in appearing before the committee of congress in support of the establishment of such a park and especially if such course should call for a substantial appropriation of money by congress."

During the extra session of the North Carolina legislature a few days ago, called for the purpose of passing a state park bill, and other recommendations of the governor, a state national park commission was authorized by legislation to cooperate with the department of the interior, and other states, looking to the location of a park in the southern Appalachians.

Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee cannot now authorize by legislation such commissions because their legislatures are not in session,

but the respective governors can appoint such state commissions to function as representatives of the governors only.

We are not presuming to suggest to the governors of the other states,

but we do unhesitatingly suggest to Governor Walker, of Georgia,

that he appoint such a commission to cooperate with the North Carolina commission, the interior department, and with such other state commissions as may be appointed.

The point is, the government has taken the initiative in the establishment of a national park in this southern mountain country, but if rivalries develop between states, and if there are cross-angled efforts,

without unity of action and the force of cooperation, the whole proposed project may be abandoned. Secretary Work has undoubtedly made plain to Senator Butler.

The proposed four-state park

would be a great national asset.

Secretary Work has expressed approval of that plan, but in order to get such a site, or to get a park

at all, it will be necessary for the four states to cooperate and not pull apart.

We want the park to run down into Georgia. It will do so if there is proper effort and cooperation.

We are not selfish enough to want to see the southern Appalachians lose a national park if no part of Georgia is chosen in the site. Any park in the southern Appalachians will have a Georgia gateway, of necessity.

At any rate, if there is cooperation between the states the park

will be created and it will touch all four of the states.

OUR BRITISH BROTHERS.

An Atlanta young lady who has spent the summer traveling in Europe wrote home a few days ago:

"I am delighted with the English.

After months of wandering around among the peoples of the continent it is a glorious thing to hear

all about you the good old English tongue. And the people—why, they look, act and see just like us."

Perhaps at no time in the past have Americans had the real heart and soul of the British nation presented to them as they have during the present year. The meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in London, which was attended by some 2,000 delegates from this side of the Atlantic, was an occasion which opened the eyes of many strangers, and presented to individual Britisher and the civic conscience of that nation in a new light. Mr. George French, of Montclair, N. J., was one of these disillusioned visitors. Writing to the New York Times he says:

"I believed that we would find the English somewhat like the portraits of them that had been drawn for us

by many authors and accepted as true

by writers in newspapers, essays and people who write our books;

rather dull as to brain action, insular

in judgments, dense as to perception, slow in speech, lacking in humor and holding themselves far superior to anybody who could possibly emanate from this hemisphere.

But an assemblage of men to whom this estimate of Englishmen, it has so completely been washed out of my mind by a two weeks' visit in England and Scotland. However, it is in that frame of mind that I met on the platform at the Waterloo station in London a delegation of English advertising and business men, and then there began my fevish of the indigenous Englishman of this day and generation."

Commenting on the suggestion that the chief motive behind the cordiality shown the visitors was the hope of improving trade, the writer says "this was promoted through the application of a spirit of brotherhood all too little exhibited in this generation." He continues:

"I found the English keen, finished,

alert, full of humor, adepts in human touch, quick in brain action, poised,

able instantly to apply their better training, finished speakers, the soul of courtesy, acute to interpret, bland in association, suave in conduct—altogether finished and understanding gentlemen. Those whom I met contrasted almost all that I had assumed of them—that I had been all my life taught to assume of them, that I have continually seen alleged about them.

"The English are deeply concerned about us. They see in America the salvation of Great Britain and they do not scruple to say so. They seek to impress us with the manifest fact that the English-speaking people have got to cling together or perish separately, which may be reasonable as they see things, if not conclusive to us. At any rate, they are extremely anxious for our trade, and they cannot trade with us without benefit resulting also to us.

"To me, it seems that it is entirely safe for us to open our hearts to our English cousins—our trade here as well as our country hearts. We have a lot to learn from them, the primary thing being that which I learned—that they are not the story-book people so insistently pictured to us,

but real people, able in an un-analysis to range along with us, where they do not surpass us, in every quality that goes to the making of real

men and women able to do their parts in urging this old world along into its proper place."

LEGALIZED NEGLIGENCE.

There are entirely too many aero-plane accidents. Every day the newspapers tell of another and the toll of life, in proportion to the ships in the air, is as great now, apparently, as five or six years ago when flying was almost in its infancy.

And there is an outstanding reason

and one that ought to be remedied. It is the same reason that causes more automobile accidents than any other, unless it is intoxication.

It is the failure of the government to require a pilot to have a license and to pass a rigid examination before legally qualifying for a license.

To illustrate, three people were killed Sunday in Long Island. The pilot had only been flying a comparatively short time and knew nothing of the science and mechanism of high-powered motors.

The government should demand of the pilot who carries a ship into the air the same expertness that it requires of the captain who takes a ship to sea.

We require the engineer who operates a stationary engine in a factory or a woodshed to have a license. But a 16-year-old boy is permitted, without a license, to operate a high-powered motor in an automobile where the danger is infinitely greater.

It is a one-sided situation and it cannot go along loosely in this manner. Pilots of airplanes and drivers of automobiles should be licensed and permitted to qualify only upon tests of efficiency.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Peculiar in All Things.

Though deeply disappointed in the bohemian, Utopia, Maxim Gorki, great Russian writer, has not lost his faith in the people of Muscovy. In his latest book he reaffirms his belief that the Russian people "are exceptionally fantastically gifted." Even fools in Russia are not fools, the foolish in a way of their own. Says the writer: Why select the fools?

Russian wit, philosophy, art, literature, all great, all great, all great,

Prince Is Mobbed At Races Atlanta's Beauty Queen and Her Party

VIRGINIA PRATT KEEPS ROYAL SMILE IN VIEW

But Enjoys Luncheon-Dance En Route to National Beauty Pageant

BY THE SAUNDERSON.
Sisseton, S. D., September 1.—(Copyright, 1924, by John Dille, reproduction prohibited.)—When the royal Wales finally went to bed at the Hudson's tonight, the light in his chamber blinking out early, it must have been with mixed emotions. The Prince of Wales attended the Belmont park races today, as I predicted in my dispatch last night, but I fancy he was sorry that he did so, for when he made his way to the paddock at Belmont park at half past three this afternoon he was mobbed, literally mobbed. Not by shop-girls, either, for there were no shop-girls present. But he was mobbed by ladies of the fashionable world who, with two or three exceptions, forgot that they were ladies and behaved with utter ill-breeding.

The Prince of Wales

Wears Onyx and Diamond Cuff Links

H. R. H. the Prince of Wales is noted for the correctness of his personal apparel. In choosing onyx and diamond cuff links he shows his good taste, for there is no other combination quite so attractive as the jet onyx and brilliant diamond.

We are showing flexible link buttons in very fine onyx, platinum set, hand-engraved, engine turned mountings with fine diamond in the center. Oval, round and square shapes. Priced from $45 up.

their mobbing tactics and then plainly annoyed. Of all the women who surrounded him only two, Mrs. V. K. Vanderbilt, 2d, and Mrs. Payne Whitney did not for a moment lose their composure and dignity.

At Belmont park the prince was the guest of Major and Mrs. August Belmont and had for a guide, Joseph E. Widener who piloted him about as much as the crowds would permit.

Guest of Pratts.
The first large and brilliant party for the prince was the luncheon followed by a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Harold I. Pratt today at their place at Roslyn, Long Island, at which happy soiree I was a guest.

The royal visitor enjoyed the festivities, for the guests included the pick of the Piping Rock beauties and the music was exactly suited to his step. The arrangements showed the usual sagacity of the Pratts. It could not spoil the fun for all the tables save the smallest were uncovered. The table at which the prince sat was under a green marquee supported by green poles entwined with grapevines on which hung bunches of green grapes. The table cover was of rare old Italian lace and all the wine glasses were dark green.

At the left of the prince sat the charming hostess; at the right sat Virginia Pratt, John T. Pratt's daughter, who is the most vivacious member of the family. Virginia, who had on a peach pink frock and a big pink hat, ran true to form. The prince laughed from cocktails to demitasse. At one of the tables at the prince's right was Mrs. James Westcott Webb and her Rogers Winthrop. At the end, side by side, was Irving Prentiss and his wife, the hostess. The prince was Lord and Lady Maudslayi, David Milburn and Louise Stoddard.

Danced With Prince.
Some of those with whom the prince danced, I noticed, were Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, the bride of whose hat touched his shoulder; Mrs. Sidney Fish, in a bright green Victorian gown, and Mrs. Andy Dana. The youngest girl to be presented to the prince was Electra Webb with her long long hair hanging around her shoulders, and the tallest girl was Constance Jennings. Mrs. Robert E. Tod, who brought her daughter, Katherine, looked charming in a white frock. The loveliest of the Ivelles present was Mrs. Ernest Iselin. Jamie Sanford, who was in white with a little black hat, was one of belles. The Hon. Frederick E. Guest and Mrs. Guest and their daughter, Diana, who know the prince well, enjoyed a long chat with him.

Charley Haydon, who was one of the most popular bachelors present, danced with all the tallest girls. Others among the men who danced often were Robert E. Strawbridge, Henry Harris, Archie Roosevelt, Harry Nichols and Stephen Sanford. Everyone flocked around Eric Pedley, the polo player, who looked almost as handsome as when wearing the purple silk shirt he wears on the polo field.

The dancing was in a long room where there is a black marble floor and beautiful tapestries. Mrs. John T. Pratt, who is head of the Pratt clan, helped to arrange the decorations, the floweriest of the Ivelles conservatory on the estate. Everyone walked in the beautiful gardens, where there is sunken pool surrounded by flowers.

August Belmont and his petite wife were among the last to appear on the scene and were among the first to leave for the races. Mrs. Raymond Belmont was also present, wearing a pretty straw hat instead of her famous black velvet turban.

Parties in Future.
All the talk today was about Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt's big party to be given Wednesday, next week. Very few invitations had gone to the Newport set and there are bound to be many disappointments. Both Muriel and Consuelo have their best friends in the Southampton set. Their only friend from Southampton who will not be present will be Nellie Livingston, who has broken her ankle.

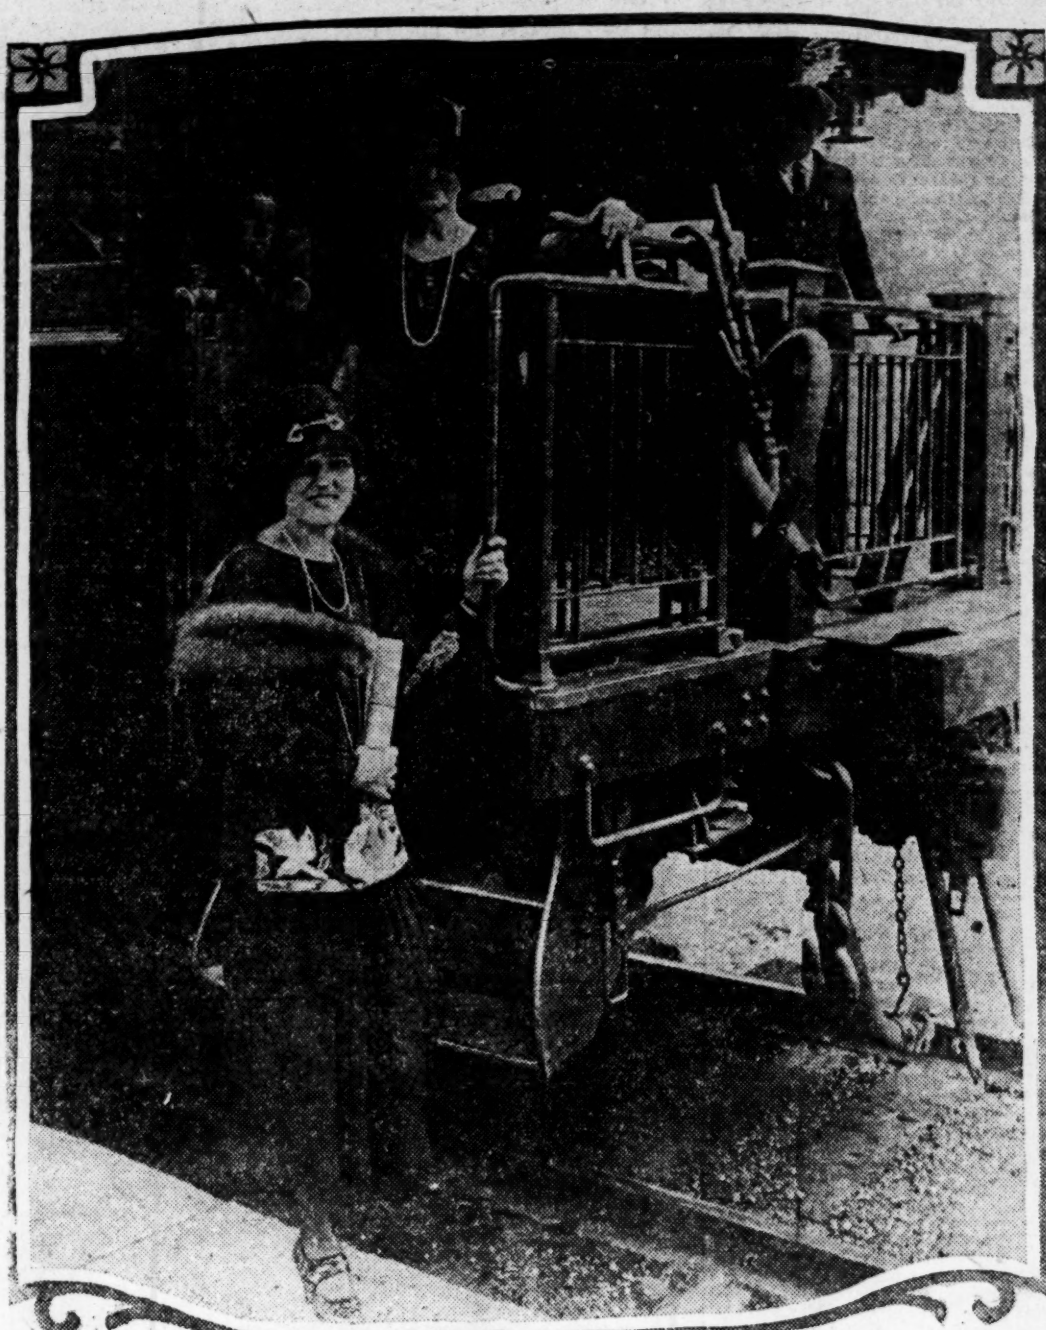

At the party Mr. and Mrs. Amherst Clark are giving tomorrow night all the racing and hunting set will be present. The Harrimans, including Mrs. R. Penn Smith, will come out strong. It is likely Kitty Penn Smith will be present and also Elio Sears, who is a very intimate friend of the hostess. Mrs. John Sanford's plans are being carefully guarded, but it is safe to assume that her friends from Saratoga will all have bids to meet the prince.

Wales made the trip today from Glen Cove in a private yacht and as he walked across the broad lawns of the Pratts the prince clutched at attention, waiting to receive him.

I observed that the eyes of the prince rested quite frequently upon the beauty of the Hon. Mrs. Richard Norton.

The William Russell Graces have made themselves popular with the Long Islanders, for when the prince played a practice game there yesterday everybody came without let or hindrance. Oh, yes—including the reporters, and they were just a little bit more pushing than seemed necessary to Wales, who showed his displeasure, although he quickly regained his accustomed good temper. He grinned when a reporter begged to know what he had had for breakfast, the reporter assuring Wales that his managing editor insisted upon knowing.

"What difference does it make?" smiled the prince, edging away from the reporters.

BY LLOYD A. WILHOIT.

Constitution Staff Correspondent.

En Route to Washington, September 1.—(Special.)—The fast Southern railroad train carrying the party of Miss Estelle Bradley, bearer of "Miss Atlanta's" title, to the Atlantic City national beauty pageant, is en route to Washington tonight and the party is due to reach the national capital about noon Tuesday.

Late Tuesday afternoon the party is due to reach Atlantic City, where a warm welcome from pageant officials awaits its members. "Miss Atlanta's" official chaperon is her mother, and also accompanying her is her sister, Miss Sara Bradley, who was one of the last twelve competitors for "Miss Atlanta's" scepter.

Tuesday night will attend the great "American Beauty Ball" on the million-dollar pier, and Wednesday she will witness the spectacular arrival of King Neptune and his train of marine attendants on the waterfront. Thursday she will compete in a glittering rolling chair parade on the Boardwalk, riding in a magnificent "Georgia peach" float presented her by The Constitution. Friday and Saturday will be marked by judging in the "Miss America" contest, the final decision being announced Saturday.

"Miss Atlanta" and her party will probably return to Atlanta next Sunday or Monday.

Miss Estelle Bradley, 17-year-old "Miss Atlanta," left Atlanta Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock for her invasion of Atlantic City, just at present with this in view, we went to New York, where we studied the great hotels of several famous chains there. We decided we could have the best features incorporated in our Atlanta house and that they could be given our guests at popular prices. We conferred with Ben J. Massell, of the Massell Realty company, who erected the Robert Fulton for us, and he agreed that our hotel should have everything that was modern and good.

Many Tips Saved.
"Our purpose," continued Mr. Wilson, "was to make the most comfortable and convenient home possible for the commercial traveler, a majority of whom are our patrons and friends. We wanted to give them the comfort without ostentation and extravagance, with the least expense. Therefore, we have included the service, which takes care of much annoyance, the running ice water that precludes many tips, and the service of meals in rooms without extra charge. We do not believe that such an array of luxuries and comforts can be had at any hotel charging from $2 to $4 a day."

With reference to Atlanta as the location of the latest unit of their great chain of hotels Messrs. Baron and Wilson said: "Atlanta will be the head of our chain of hotels, and this city will be the center of our organization. One of the firm will always be here to look after matters relating to the hotels of the company."

"Atlanta is the leading city of the south, and we hope to make the Robert Fulton the leading hotel of our chain. We hear much about the statements that Atlanta is overbuilt, etc., but in our opinion, a city with such a spirit as that possessed by Atlanta cannot be overbuilt. We are seeking to make our hotel a real high-class home for commercial travelers, and we are giving them the best that modern building practice and up-to-date hotel usage affords."

Hundreds Visit Hotel.
With only 100 of the guests' rooms completed in time for the opening, Monday evening the space to be allotted to applicants was limited. The register showed guests arriving from practically all parts of the south, attracted to Atlanta by the opening of this fine hotel. It was stated that in addition to the registered guests, there were hundreds of people living in Atlanta who visited the hotel on its opening night. Manager Harry Zobel, Chief Clerk J. R. Houston and Pat H. Akin, who are in charge of the office during the day, were busy showing visitors about the building and pointing out to them the many new things the guest rooms contained. Many enthusiastic words of praise were spoken by prominent Atlanta citizens about the appointments of the Robert Fulton, and predictions were made that it will prove immediately popular with the commercial men of the south.

Aside from the praise given the modern appointments found in the guest rooms of the Robert Fulton, there were also many words of commendation concerning the beautiful lobby, which is finished in gray Georgia marble and furnished with handsome period chairs, settees and lounges. The draperies in the lobby and on the mezzanine floor are also highly attractive, being of the most beautiful damascene with brocade figure. These hangings harmonize perfectly with the finish and the furnishings of the lobby, and the effect is strikingly beautiful.

Assembly Room on Mezzanine.
A feature of the mezzanine floor is the assembly room, which may be divided into one, two or three rooms as required. This room is equipped with baths and may be utilized as a bedroom if necessary. The ladies' writing room, located on the mezzanine floor, is another beautiful feature of the hotel which attracted much attention and comment.

A complete staff of bell boys in new uniforms stood ready to do the bidding of the guests and everything was in readiness to proceed with business except the 200 or more guest rooms, which have yet to be completed. These, however, will be finished within a short time and a formal opening of the splendid new hotel will be held at a later date, it was stated. The cafe, which has been leased by Mrs. A. D. Hall, will open today.

When the inside's all right—and the outside's all wrong

A few changes make a world of difference in an old house

Could anything be simpler than adding to an old house a Colonial entrance porch, a new green roof and green shutters? Almost anyone could think of that.

But we didn't—until we got the book, "Better Homes from Old Houses." Our old house was comfortable and well-built, but, as the little picture shows, unpleasantly plain on the outside. Time and again we decided to remodel it but we never knew how to go at it. Then—

We sent for the Barrett Book

In no time we found just the changes needed. The next day we called in our local contractor, and in a few weeks the job was done. Now, we're proud of our "new" home. And we haven't stopped talking yet about the low cost of these changes.

Get the Barrett Book yourself!

If you can't see just how to improve your old house, get the Barrett Book. It's full of practical plans and sketches—suggestions that will enable you to make your home more attractive and more valuable. Various types of houses are shown with a series of practical alterations for each one. You are sure to find a plan that fits your house—and your purse.

Get the Barrett Book!

Prepared by a staff of leading architects, "Better Homes from Old Houses" makes home-remodeling simple and economical. Every common type of old house is featured. Every step is carefully explained in plans, sketches and text. It shows you all the shortcuts to a modern, comfortable home. Your hardware, lumber or building supply merchant has this book or—

FOOTBALL PRACTICE OPENS IN THE COLLEGES

Johnson Plays Tilden Today for Net Title

Forest Hills, N. Y., September 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—William T. Tilden was forced to five thrilling, gripping sets today before he conquered his youthful former pupil, Vincent Richards, in the semi-final of the national tournament and won the right to defend his title tomorrow against the man who had been his chief rival for the past five years.

But the crowd that Tilden has won for four successive seasons came perilously close to toppling from his head before he beat back the spectacular challenge of Richards, who not only took two sets from the titleholder, but came within a point of winning a third. Tilden, however, facing the closest call he has had since he took five sets to "turn back" Johnson in the 1922 title final—the last time he was forced to that limit—rose to the greatest heights of his brilliancy to check the young Olympic champion. The scores of this epic struggle were 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Tilden's stirring victory followed a crushing triumph in the other semi-final match by Johnson, who smoothly defeated Gerald L. Patterson, leader of the Australian Davis cup forces, by the score of 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

Thus, while "Big Bill" was being fought the fight of his life his veteran, "Little Bill," in allowing the giant Australian only two games, was scoring one of the most convincing, amazing triumphs of his career.

The astonishing ease with which Johnson disposed of Patterson, despite the fact that the Australian intently eased up toward the end, capped the climax of the little Californian's comeback so far this season. Seldom, critics agreed, has the veteran titleholder of 1915 and 1916 been so impressive as he was today. His supporters tonight are confident he is ripe to give Tilden a great and possibly victorious fight in tomorrow's final.

Tilden's showing against Richards, brilliant as it was, was the youngest's performance, has lessened the theory of invincibility which popular opinion has surmised for him.

With Johnson undoubtedly on edge he has a hard, hard struggle on his hands tomorrow, a match that promises to rival in its drama the previous encounters between these two in the national title tournament.

Johnson and Tilden have met in the final in four of the past five championships. Johnson was the victor in 1919 but Tilden has been conqueror in 1920, 1922 and 1923.

The lack of a title war in 1921 and Tilden won in a match which was the climax of the tournament for the champion went on to defeat Wallace Johnson easily in the final.

of the holiday gas here Monday from the Mobile Bears. The Crackers won the first game, which went 13 innings, 10 to 7, while they just breezed along with a repetition of their terrific hitting in the afternoon struggle and made it an 8-to-1 victory.

Atlanta, in the morning contest, used two pitchers, Searza, who started, being tinkered in the ninth inning when he weakened and was responsible for the score being tied. McLaughlin finished the game and the Crackers batted in a victory for him in their final inning.

Mobile used two pitchers in the game, "Bud" Shaney, a right-hander, who was batted all over the diamond scores in the ninth. Good drew a free gate to first and went to third on Paschal's double to center and both scored when "Red" Smith registered his second hit of this contest, a single to right field.

The Crackers will close their stay in Mobile tomorrow and the chances are that Dunton will work for the visitors, while Searza will pitch for the Bears. Wednesday the Crackers will rest here and go to New Orleans Thursday morning.

Francis Does His Stuff.

Ray Francis was the master of the Reds in the afternoon game, holding Mobile to one run and seven scattered hits. Francis hurled shut-out ball until Mobile's seventh when his own error put a runner in. His stuff scored on. The Crackers batted hard behind Francis, chalking up 16 hits, winning their total for the day up to 33 runs. The big crowd of 1,000, being a home run, two triples and a double.

After the Crackers had handed Ellis an awful lacing for seven innings the Mobile hurler was taken out for a pinch-hitter and Tommy Long finished up the afternoon pitching and the Crackers scored on him twice in the ninth inning.

Manager Emil Huhn filed a protest of the second game with Umpires Doolan and Williams on the ground that the Atlanta players baited out the Atlanta fans in the ninth inning, after being at bat in the seventh and eighth.

the eighth and took his place at the plate. The official crowd and Atlanta news scribbles called to Unimore Doolan that Autrey was batting out of order, but he paid no attention to them. Autrey went out from manager to first. In the next inning Hanover Huhn called attention to it

Manager Niehoff told Empire bloopers he could rule all batters out for the rest of the game, but the Empire manager, who was in charge of the game, said he would not let him do that. Doolan said it was the first time the question had come up and he would not rule.

The Empire crackerers in the two games was unquestionably the cause of the defeats of the Mobile Club today.

Dick Burrus, one of the league leaders in batting, and Frankie Zoellers led the visiting team in the double holiday engagement with a total of six hits each. Zoellers was the leader of the team, having four hits and five singles, while the sensational first sacker of the flag chasers balked up a triple and five singles in the game, and he batted in four singles in the first game and a double in the second, while "Red" Smith, the leading hitter of the Martin club, said one of his five hits, securing a triple, walking in one in the two games and getting a sacrifice.

Manager Niehoff, although he was out of the game in the ninth inning of the first contest, still won the first play in the two contests, taking part in the five double plays staged by the crackerers. The entire Atlanta club was in the fielding line in the twin engagement.

Atlanta Scores First.

Acosta 2; struck out by Swartz 5, by Shaney 1; by McLaughlin 5, by Swartz 1; hitoff by Williams 14 in 8-3-3 innings, with 6 runs; hit by pitcher, Shaney (Krehmeier); pressed ball, Rupp, winning the game, 1-0, by losing pitcher, Acosta. Empires, Williams and Doolan. Time, 7:25.

Atlanta was first to score in the first game counting one run in the second inning on Burrus' triple to right center and Niehoff's pinch single. Frankie Zoellers, with two down a home run over a right field fence in the third inning, putting the Athletics ahead 1-0.

Mobile tied up this session, which was to be a neck and neck affair. The team, trailing from 10-4, m. 11-13 p.m., hit a three-run homer in the third inning. Two singles, a walk, a wild leave by Zoellers and a sacrifice fly doing the work.

The two clubs remained scoreless until Atlanta took the bat in the ninth, a run scoring on Smith's single to right and Night's second strikeout.

Elks in Mourning As Juniors Tame Their Ball Team

BY RALPH J. JONES.

When the Atlanta lodge of Elks locked horns with the Junior Chamber of Commerce in a baseball game at Spiller's park Monday afternoon for the benefit of the Elks' Empty Stomach fund, the children who will be beneficiaries of Christmas time proved the only section of Elklion that could count the afternoon well spent.

HIS RECORD IS HIS PLATFORM

Statement by John T. Boiffeillet, of Macon, Candidate to Succeed Himself as Georgia Public Service Commissioner.

To the White Voters of Georgia: If you wish to continue in office a Georgia Public Service Commissioner who has been unceasingly watchful of the interests of the people—who has endeavored unflinchingly to protect the rights of the masses—and in the face of the opposition of powerful corporations and powerful utilities has unhesitatingly voted against unreasonable increases in rates, then vote in the primary on September 10th for my re-nomination to succeed myself on the Commission.

My faithful record is the platform upon which I firmly stand in respectfully requesting your influence and votes. In order not to make this statement too lengthy, I am herewith relating only a part of that record, as follows:

I voted against granting increased rates in Georgia to the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company. Honorable Frank Robertson, the distinguished Attorney General of Mississippi, complimented my dissenting opinion in the telephone case by inserting it in his printed brief for the State of Mississippi in its opposition before the Mississippi Commission to a proposed increase in telephone rates in that State. He incorporated my opinion into his brief with these words: "Commissioner Boiffeillet, of the Georgia Commission, dissented against my increase in Southern Bell Telephone rates in that State whatever. His dissenting opinion shows a very clear conception of the telephone situation, and is so appropos that I set it out in full."

I voted against granting increased rates to the express companies in Georgia. Later, the Interstate Commerce Commission ordered a reduction in express rates, which action showed the wisdom and justice of my refusal to favor increased rates.

I voted against granting the Georgia Railway and Power Company an increase in the gas rates of Atlanta from $1.45 to $1.90 net per 1,000 cubic feet. Subsequently, when protesting citizens of Atlanta asked the Commission to rescind its order allowing the increase, I moved that the order be rescinded, but my motion was defeated.

I voted in favor of the petition of the Board of Education of the City of Atlanta to require the Georgia Railway and Power Company to give one-half fares to the public school children of Atlanta who travel on the street cars of said company on their way to and returning from school.

I have voted five times against the surcharge on sleeping and parlor cars, as I consider the tax unjust and unreasonable.

Against Increased Freight Rates. I voted twice, on an aye and nay roll call of the Commission, against the local freight rates which went into effect in Georgia last year, because they increased rates to practically every point on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad; to practically every point on the Western and Atlantic Railroad; to practically every point on the Georgia Railroad, and also increased the rates on numerous places on the other great railroad systems of the State, like the Central, Southern, Seaboard, Louisville and Nashville, and Atlantic Coast Line. Increases were made from the mountains to the sea.

I favored giving the small towns equal advantage with the large cities, but I preferred doing this by reducing the high rates to a level with the low rates, and not raising the low rates to a level with the high. Therefore, I voted against the upward revision of rates which was established.

By voting in opposition to these increases, I sought to benefit the agricultural interests of Georgia, and help consumers and shippers generally. I believed that reduced rates would stimulate business, increase traffic, encourage farming production, and thus in reality augment the revenues of the railroads.

The innumerable and emphatic protests that have come from all parts of the State against these increased local freight rates are overwhelming proof of the correctness and justice of my action in opposing the advances.

by every available scorer in the grandstand, as well as the official bookkeeper, was 6 to 0 for the Chamber.

"Pop" Gleason, who knows more about amateur baseball and amateur baseball players than any other individual around Atlanta, generously advised all who wished to place small bets on the outcome of the game to back the Elks to win. This was before "Fat" Elrod, acting the dual role of announcer and umpire on bases, had megaphoned the line-up. "Pop" stuck to his prediction, even after the score stood 6 to 0 against the purple-socked fraternalists, but went home peacefully enough after the final strike-out of the game.

Familiar With Elks. The truth of the matter was, but Worley Adams, pitching for the Junior Chamber, knows too much about Elks and their habits. Realizing, probably, that the Elks in its native lair is a more or less wild beast, Mr. Adams was himself just wild enough to walk half a dozen men at times when there was no danger of their eventually scoring. Otherwise, he struck 'em out just about as he wished and at all times proved himself adept at timing the most ferocious of the animals.

Again quoting "Pop," the two teams belong to a classification in amateur baseball, where the rules limit each side to five "ringers" for the first eight innings of each game, with exception of charity games, where the rule is broadened to allow all ringers except the captain.

For the Elks, "Tubby" Walton, right fielder, proved the star. The corpulent gardener pulled in two circus catches, after heart-breaking runs of at least 10 feet in each case. This, together with his elephantine base-running, caused "Tubby" to finish the game in a blaze of glory and a profuse perspiration. His brother, Horace, playing center, did not shine quite so spectacularly, but did reach first when a ball bounced to the grandstand after it had hit the side of his head.

Junior Chamber Stars. For the Junior Chamber, stars in addition to Pitcher Adams, were Medlock, with the only home run of the game to his credit; "Goat" Holliday, Catcher Gullledge and Center Fielder Lewis. Lewis contributed a spectacular catch and a timely Texas leaguer.

"Big Jim" LaFitte, former catcher for the Cincinnati Nationals and New Orleans Pelicans, caught for the Elks and proved by his pegging to second that his arm is 'most as good as ever. After Sullivan, who started in the box, had been yanked, Lowry pitched a nice game for the Elks.

Anyway, the game was a success in the only way that mattered—in the receipts taken in for the Empty Stomach fund. And Mr. Adams, Chamber pitcher, could make a fortune in the big leagues if all the opposing batters were Elks.

Miss Cannon Weds William Ralph Baker.

Quiet, though beautiful in its simplicity, was the marriage of Miss Thelma Roberta Cannon and William Ralph Baker, which was solemnized Sunday afternoon, August 24, at the Rev. Floyd Surles officiating.

The bride was a beautiful figure in her wedding gown of navy blue crepe-back satin attractively hand embroidered, and hat and shoes of black. Her flowers were Columbia roses, lilies of the valley and fern.

Mrs. C. E. Hopkins as matron of honor, was very attractive in her gown of blue flat crepe with finishing of grey, and hat and shoes of grey. Her flowers were pink radiance roses and fern.

Mr. Baker was attended by George F. Snyder, of Atlanta, as best man. Mrs. Baker is a young woman of very delightful and charming personality, and is loved and admired by a host of friends, both young and old, and they regret that she will leave for another city to make her home.

Mr. Baker is formerly of Knoxville, Tenn., but is now making his home in Norfolk, Va.

Miss Malesse Carter Is Honored.

Miss Jane Williams entertained Monday afternoon at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Crawford Gurley, in Shadow Lawn avenue in honor of Miss Malesse Carter, of Meridian, Miss., who is the guest of Miss Jeannette Staples, at her home in Ponce de Leon avenue.

The reception rooms were decorated with mid-summer garden flowers.

The hostess in a gown in a summer frock of powder blue crepe de chine.

Mrs. Crawford Gurley assisted in the entertainment of the guests.

Those present were: Miss Staples, Miss Marian Williams, Miss Ruby Legg, Miss Alice Carmichael and her guest, Miss Katharine Hall, of Tifton, Ga.; Miss Dorothy Fluker, Miss Elizabeth Murphy and Miss Margaret Cochran.

Dr. Culpepper has just returned from Tampa, where he went with the officers from here. He found a car which he says he traded to Lay and succeeded in getting it and about $700 of the money said to have been paid to Lay. Lay will be kept in jail to answer the charge against him.

Miss Barton Weds Jess F. Wilhoit At Church Ceremony

A marriage characterized by a great beauty was that of Miss Lula Elizabeth Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Barton to Jess Franklin Wilhoit, which was solemnized Saturday evening at 6 o'clock at the West End Baptist church. Reverend John F. Purser performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

During the assemblage of the guests Mrs. Lucy Swann Mack rendered an artistic selection of wedding music. Just before the entrance of the bride party Miss Elizabeth Macy sang "O Promise Me," and Grieg's "I Love You." Miss Macy was dressed in yellow georgette and wore a corsage of sweetheart roses.

Lohengrin's wedding march announced the approach of the bride party and Mendelssohn's wedding music was used as a recessional.

The altar was banked with quantities of ferns, smilax, and palms interspersed with tall pedestal baskets filled with asparagus, gladioli, and phloxes. Back of the palms tall cathedral candelabras holding burning tapers cast a soft glow over the lovely scene.

Bridal Attendants.
The bride's younger sisters, Miss Margaret and Miss Ruth Barton, were the bridesmaids. The groom's nephews, James Wilhoit and William Mattheissen, were the ushers.

The bridesmaid's gowns were fashioned alike of flesh georgette over foundation of pink satin, with bouffant skirts with ruffles of chantilly lace and old-fashioned bodices with drop shoulders. The gowns were caught at the side with large bows of apple green satin. They wore wristlets of black velvet and black satin slippers with flesh-colored hose. They carried old-fashioned nosegays of vari-colored garden flowers tied with green tulle.

Next entered the bride's sister, Miss Lella Barton, who was her maid of honor. She wore an exquisite gown of apple green georgette and Mehlman lace over self-colored chiffon. The gown was made with bouffant skirt and tight fitting bodice. A panel of flesh-colored satin ribbon fell from the waistline the entire length of the skirt. She wore silver slippers and hose to match. Her flowers were pink roses showered with swainsona and tied with flesh tulle.

Little Miss Anne Wilhoit was the flower girl and Master Royal Camp, Jr., the ring bearer. The flower girl wore a dainty frock of white tulle with trimmings of silver, white kid slippers and socks completed her costume. She carried a nosegay showered with garden flowers. The ring bearer wore an Oliver Twist suit of black satin with white satin ruffled blouse.

The bride entered with her father, and met the groom and his best man, W. T. Trussell, at the altar.

Lovely Bride.

The bride was radiantly beautiful in her wedding gown of sheer white georgette over foundation of white satin. It was fashioned with basque waist and bouffant skirt with tiny tucks alternated with bands of exquisite chantilly lace. The neck and sleeves were outlined with seed pearls. Her lovely tulle veil was made high in the back to form a ruche and was confined to her soft blonde hair by a wreath of orange blossoms. The veil was caught to her shoulders with sprays of orange blossoms and fell in graceful folds to form a train. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for Charleston where they will sail on "The Apache" for New York. They will visit Canada, Niagara Falls and other points in the east.

The bride's going away gown was a smart one-piece model of brown satin back crepe trimmed in hand-made roses of the same material. Her hat was a model of blue lustrous. A smart choker completed her costume.

The bride's mother wore brown brocade crepe with hat of gold tissue combined with brown velvet. Her corsage wore Ophelia roses and swainsona.

Miss Lella McCarty, aunt of the bride, wore blue flat crepe combined with tan lace and purple velvet hat.

Georgia Growers Plan Peach Sales Direct to London

Savannah, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—Fort Valley, Ga., peaches have been shipped via Savannah, and the Ocean Steamship company lines to London, England, and arrived there in perfect condition, eliciting enthusiastic comment from experts of the fruit markets of London. Experts here declare that the demonstration is a forerunner of coming shipments of shiploads of Georgia peaches to England in refrigerated cars to Savannah and then in refrigerated compartments aboard ships across. Experts say that only the lack of facilities for perfectly keeping the fruit in condition here while being transferred in great quantities to refrigeration ship quarters and supply sufficient to justify such cold storage on shipboard prevents the immediate shipment of millions of peaches abroad from Georgia.

The shipment, in which the test was successfully made, was sent from R. E. & V. L. Brown, of Fort Valley, to the London market. They have received assurance of the safe and satisfactory arrival of the small lot.

J. M. Mallory, industrial agent of the Central of Georgia railroad, was in London when the shipment arrived. The shippers received the following letter concerning the experiment:

"London, E. C. 3, 13th August, 1924.
"Messrs. R. E. & V. L. Brown,
"Fort Valley, Ga., U. S. A.
"Gentlemen:

"I have very much pleasure in advising you that a few days ago J. M. Mallory, general agent in charge of the Central of Georgia railway, and ourselves were looking into the question of the peach market in London with a view of possibly having the Georgia peaches shipped in here. Mr. Mallory was surprised to find some Elberta peaches shipped by you and properly marked as from R. E. & V. L. Brown, of Fort Valley, Georgia, which arrived in the London market in good condition. Mr. Mallory asked me to send you a line to this effect and at the same time to send you his kind regards. Mr. Mallory also added that he believed there were great possibilities in the shipping of Georgia peaches to Great Britain and that he proposed following the matter up with you very closely in this connection on his return to America. Yours very truly, (Signed) "DONALD ROSE,
"European Traffic Manager."

Decatur Women Leading the Way In Practical Child Welfare Work

Mrs. Floyd Field, chairman of the DeKalb Public Health committee, responsible for the children's clinic in Decatur which in a brief year of service has proven a boon to the entire county and is planning to extend its aid to expectant mothers.

BY MRS. McCORD ROBERTS.

Result—a child clinic in daily operation and administered on correct business principles which have long since made it self-supporting even though a truly wonderful philanthropic institution. This is what Decatur women have to show for one year of prayer and faith and work. While much child welfare talking has been going on "about it and about" a handful of doers in Decatur have up and done, setting a pace that all their sisters should hurry to get in step with.

At 121 West Ponce de Leon avenue in Decatur is a one-story five-room cottage looking much like its neighbors to the passerby, just as the Decatur women look not so unlike their well-groomed, pleasant-mannered and intelligent sisters of other places. But within! Within, every day in the week, the children of DeKalb county are individually and collectively experiencing tangible proof of what women can do when they turn their attention from passing resolutions, enunciating slogans and planning political moves to constructive action.

Begins at Missionary Meeting.

The origin of what has become an effective working out of the provisions of the Ellis health law, this county clinic is not only an example of what earnest and big-hearted women can do to start right the future citizens of the community, but is an example of the way in which many women's missionary societies are reaching out the hand of service in nearby wildernesses of need as well as foreign fields. Although two successive grand juries in DeKalb county as far back as four years ago voted favorably for the passage of the Ellis health law in the county, thereby making the law legally effective by establishing a board of health, consisting of the county commissioner, county school superintendent and physician from the county at large, no definite action was taken toward putting this law into effect by appointing a health officer for the county, the board of health, like many another official body, finding it difficult to function where no public sentiment supported it.

Mrs. Alton Ragsdale, Mrs. Lucy Gardner, Mrs. J. C. Le Hardy, Mrs. J. B. Richards, Mrs. O. N. Stanton, Mrs. Frank Pond, Mrs. A. E. White, Mrs. W. L. Young. Each is an appointed representative from a woman's organization in Decatur and nearby county, and each represents either a church or a civic group.

Prayer and Work.

"Every meeting of the committee formed that day is opened with prayer for Divine guidance and help," is the way Mrs. Field explains their instant success in this undertaking, and truly in all its work it must have been Divinely approved; for the necessary money to inaugurate the work came from the clouds and grew by the wayside until today there is a five-room cottage on Ponce de Leon avenue, near the court house, where 100 ailing little children were relieved of difficulties the very first month, and where today Dr. W. A. Harrison, county health officer, superintends six hospital beds and an operating room, a dental room and a nurse always on duty, so that often as many as 50 operations a week are performed to help children who, were it not for this clinic, would just have to go on suffering and failing to make good in this great land of ours. Other operations and much other treatment is given for a nominal fee, charged in all cases where parents are able to pay, and it is from this small inflow of money that the DeKalb Public Health committee finances the institution, thereby proving that practical business sense governs the heads of these far-seeing Decatur women.

To Add Another Nurse.

So efficiently has the service rendered been conducted, so has the Lord prospered this work. The second year's beginning is to be marked with an addition to the clinic personnel of a visiting nurse whose instructive care will be largely devoted to maternity cases.

How were funds found with which to make a beginning? Why, as simply as most great work begins that women do. A call went out through that marvelous machinery for good, organized womanhood, in clubs and societies and Parent-Teacher associations asking every child in the county to take part in helping themselves by contributing 20 cents apiece.

WHOLE CLASS GOES TO SAME COLLEGE

Sparta, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—Sparta and Hancock county will send an unusual number of students this year to the different colleges over the state. They are now making ready to leave early in the month for their various centers of learning.

In one instance a whole graduating class will attend the agricultural college, near here, in a body. This class graduated at the Beulah school in this county. A large percentage of the graduating classes from all the schools will attend some college.

SPARTA SCHOOLS OPEN ON MONDAY, SEPT. 8

Sparta, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—Professor W. R. Lanier, who was recently elected superintendent of the Sparta public schools, has arrived and is making preparations to move his family here from Dublin.

Used Kellogg's Bran 2 months— constipation gone after suffering 3 years

Three years of suffering with constipation. What happiness was his when Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, restored his health. But read his letter.

"Dear Sirs:
... this is what I think of your krumbled bran. I would not be without it for anything in the world. ... for three years I used all kinds of medicines for constipation, and only got temporary relief. I was advised by a doctor to use Kellogg's Bran, and since I began using it I don't have to take pills or anything else. I have used it two months, and my constipation has left me. I feel better now than I have for three years!"
(The original of this letter is on file at the Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Mich.)

Kellogg's Bran brings results because it is ALL bran. You can't fight constipation with halfway mea-

HEIRS ATTACK WILL

Seek to Set Aside Verbal "Document" of Hucks.

Savannah, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—The validity of a "verbal" or nonexecutive will, was attacked in ordinary court here today, when a caveat was filed against the probating of the will of W. A. Hucks, who, before his death recently called in five witnesses and dictated a verbal will in which he left his whole estate to a crippled nephew, Charles Hucks. A brother of the deceased contests the will. Two brothers and six nephews and nieces claim to be legal heirs. A decision was not rendered today.

Superintendent Lanier is a man of long experience and is already getting affairs in shape for the opening on Monday, September 8.

The entire faculty of the schools has been elected and acceptances received.

GEORGIA EDITORS PLAN TRIP TO NEW YORK

Savannah, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—Jack D. McCartney, Savannah, honorary member of the Georgia Press association, reports that, in addition to attending to railroad business, he made a tentative general program for the visit of the Georgia editors on their trip to Gotham next April. Instead of the midwinter meeting, and as a substitute for an extensive side trip after the regular annual summer meeting in West Point next year, the association agreed to take up the proposal of the Ocean Steamship company, "the Savannah line," for an arrangement whereby the newspaper editors will make a trip to New York on a special coast liner of the company, probably the City of Chattanooga.

Mr. McCartney said that the Georgia society of New York will give the Georgia newspapermen a banquet. A tug will be engaged to take the entire party on a tour of the harbor, there will be bus trips over the city to points of interest, more elaborate and in detail than the usual sight-seeing tours, and visits will be made to the zoo, the stock exchange, newspaper offices and numerous other places.

Health Much Better After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"Your little book left at my door was my best doctor. I read it, then said to my husband, 'Please go and get me some Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I want to take it.' The first month I took three bottles of Vegetable Compound and one of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. If you only knew how much better I feel! Now when my friends say they are sick I tell them to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I give the little book and your medicines the best of thanks."—Mrs. HAMBURK, 3765 25th Street, Detroit, Mich.

In newspapers and booklets we are constantly publishing letters from women, who explain how they were helped by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

These letters should guide you. If you are troubled with pains and nervousness, or any feminine disorder, bear in mind that the Vegetable Compound has helped other women and should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

The Luxury of Love

BY VIOLET DARE

XIV—The Horse Show.

Everyone for miles around deserted home, clubhouse and golf links the next afternoon for the sake of the charity horse show. The Boots and Saddles club was crowded, as was the small grandstand that faced the ring. Automobiles were lined up three deep, and there were people standing, even as far back as the sta.

Everyone was most eagerly awaiting the third event, in which Mrs. Hayward was to ride Salambo. The news of her engagement to Nigel Cavendish had spread like wildfire; Camilla's betrothal to Bruce Gillian took second place.

The silvery notes of a bugle cut across the buzz of talk that was going on all around the ring. A moment's pause, then little Nancy Atwood rode into the ring. She was just fifteen, and looked very young in her small as she put her horse to the cutter and rode straight at the first of the three hurdles. Her horse cleared it easily; cleared the second also, and came to the third hurdle, just in front of the grandstand. A handkerchief fluttered to the ground just then; a woman in the stand had dropped it. The horse shied, hit the hurdle sideways, and Nancy fell to the ground.

She was a little thing; on her feet as an adult, but when she mounted again, but Vera Atwood's voice rang out clearly: "Nancy, don't you go near that horse!" And obediently little Nancy left the ring while her friends applauded madly.

The second entry was from the famous stables of a millionaire; the horse was ridden by an army officer, a friend of the owner. It was a beautiful gray, and took the first two hurdles in the stride, almost as if unconscious of them. A spatter of applause greeted the performance. The third hurdle—once more fate stepped in. The horse came at it easily enough; nobody could see just what went wrong. But his front feet hit the top bar, and he was thrown forward. The rider went over his head, and was picked up with a broken collar bone.

Three times and then out! "What'll happen this time?" "The next entry is Mary Hayward on Salambo: I'm almost afraid to watch!" The hum of talk was worse than ever. Mary rode into the ring just then. She sat her horse perfectly. He was quiet enough, contrary to the expectations of the crowd, who knew his reputation. He was a huge black brute, a sullen, ugly thing. Mary put him at the first hurdle. He started slowly, then broke into a plunging gallop, taking great, leaping strides; he was almost on the hurdle before he jumped it. To the crowd gathered in motor cars all about the fence edging the ring it looked almost as if Mary had lifted him bodily. She leaned forward as her horse jumped, laying both hands flat on his neck, sitting clear of the saddle. It was a perfect jump, and enthusiastic applause greeted it.

The second hurdle. Again the horse slowed down, broke into his plunging run, took the hurdle almost as his front feet touched it. Applause again, and a great sigh of relief swept through the crowd. "Nothing can happen now," murmured Vera Atwood, her arm around her young daughter.

"Never can tell," answered her husband warily. "Of course, Mary's riding magnificently."

"She always does; she does everything that way," replied Vera promptly. "And I'm so glad that she's going to marry Cavendish; it simply makes me sick, the way Camilla treats Mary. I can't see why Mary puts up with it. And Bruce Gillian seems to have less than no sense at all. How he could even look at Camilla when Mary was around—for that matter, he acted as if he thought Mary—"

"Here she comes!" Atwood cut in, paying not attention to her chatter. She was coming indeed. Salambo stood a moment, shaking his head angrily; then, holding it low, he started for the hurdle, not as he had taken the others, slowly and then lifting at the last moment, but almost as if he ran blindly, hardly seeing the barrier. Mary's face was white, her jaw set. She dropped one rein, but it was the one on the side away from the grandstand, and the nearest spectators were on the other side of the ring. Her arms were out, she did it intentionally. She took her left foot almost out of the stirrup. Yet the horse went crashing into the hurdle, clearing only the first two sticks, she kept her seat for a moment, instinctively gripping him with her knees. Then she fell. And Salambo whirled, hoofs up, to trample her. It was a moment full of sheer horror. Vera Atwood fainted, as did other women in the stand and nearby motors. Half a dozen men leaped the fence surrounding the ring to go to the rescue. Their shouts caught the attention of the horse for an instant; he turned to them, then turned to Mary again. It seemed impossible that anything could save her.

Never had tragedy seemed more inevitable than in that moment when Mary Hayward lay there by the last hurdle, with Salambo intent on trampling her to death.

It was picturesque, in a way; Mary's crumpled little figure in white riding togs, the white-painted hurdle, the huge black horse standing on his hind legs.

Then suddenly it changed. Another figure was added to the scene. Bruce Gillian had hurled himself into it somehow. He caught Mary up in his arms, but not quite quickly enough. Salambo came crashing down upon them, but Gillian managed to protect the girl with his own body. He, and not Mary, received the crushing force of those great hoofs.

PLANTERS OF TOOMBS HARVEST BIG CROPS

Lyns, Ga., Sept. 1.—(Special.)—Most of the cotton in Toombs county is open and being picked just as fast as the farmers can get it out. The yields sound like prewar days, as field after field is yielding from one-half to a bale to the acre.

A yield of eight bales to 12 acres in a field is common this year. Both crops here at Lyns are running until 12 o'clock each night and usually have cotton in the yard when they stop. Long lines of wagons are waiting all day for their turn.

A survey shows that this county has made a big yield of corn. One farmer said yesterday that he wanted to be listed as having 1,000 bushels of corn to sell.

GREEN COUNTY NEGRO MARKETS FIRST BALE

Greensboro, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—The first bale of Green county cotton has been received. The bale was grown by Pompey Tripp, negro farmer. Tripp brought in 1,400 pounds of seed cotton.

Tomorrow—Continuing Fun Shop

Today we are getting our counters ready for the presentation, tomorrow, of a splendid stock of Jingle-Jingles, Bright Sayings of Children and odds and ends.

Our sale yesterday of Verses and Reveries was highly successful—so much so that we may devote another day this week to them.

Today, however, we present our regular offerings.

September Blues.

The melancholy days are here, As sang some bloomin' poet. Who must o' had September blues An' took that way to show it.

Though I ain't claimin' to be wise, Like this here versifier, He surely spilled a pot o' sense When he twanged on his lyre

"Th' melancholy days" is right, As all my heart is knowin', Th' while I sadly shake my head To see th' summer goin'!

September only laughs at me An' all my foolish hope, To hold back th' flight o' time So that th' schools won't open!

—Edgar Daniel Kramer.

Wasted Effort.

Little Bobby was told that if he played hard he might get a little star.

So, one night, after he had played for some time, he added:—dear Lord, if you have a baby almost finished, don't wait to put in the towels, as they have to be taken out anyway.

Reigning Monarch.

Madge: "What broke up the mah jongg game at the Newports?"

Marjorie: "Their kid mistook the tiles for his building blocks and they wouldn't let us take them away from him."

—James J. O'Connell.

Such Is Vanity!

Mary: "How did Bertha sprain her wrist, dear?"

Eleanor: "Showing off her new engagement ring, I believe."

—H. D. Slater.

How He Gets By.

The bullfrog has the biggest pull Of any pollywog. With awn and bunc he fills 'em full;

The tadpoles stand agog. The bullfrog sure is nine-tenths bull And one-tenth only—frog.

—C. L. Edson.

In the recent Ziegfeld "Follies" in New York there was a burlesque on Columbus and Queen Isabella of Spain.

"You're an angel," Columbus murmured. "You've done so much for me."

"I'm no angel," replied Queen Isabella. "And it isn't the half of what I'd like to do for you! I hooked my jewels to get them ferried because I am stuck on you! Columbus, the gem of my ocean!"

Appetizing.

Motorist: "Six hot frankfurter sandwiches with sauerkraut, please."

Roadside Vendor (to assistant): "Litter o' six pups with the baidin'!"

—P. H. Carter.

Trooper O'Neill

"Where have you been?" she asked.

"By the river," replied Paul. "We have been letter—and now we know—care!"

LeStrange rose to his feet as Paul produced eight small pieces of paper, and laid them on the table in their correct order. His eyes blazed with hate as he read the penciled message:

"Dear Celeste: "What is done is done. It cannot be helped. I think we were both mistaken in believing that we loved each other. It must be goodbye as I return east in a few days. You know I am sorry for you, but to marry you would only bring misery to us both. Do not come to the hut again, it is better that we see no more of each other."

"JACOB DELL," Paul took the pieces of paper, and placed them in his pocket. Marie looked at Pierre's convulsed face. It was clear enough now. She remembered Dell—a middle-aged man, who was surveying the country for a new railway company that was contemplating the construction of a track from Winnipeg to Edmonton, via Prince Albert—a scheme that was destined to end in smoke, like so many similar schemes of that day.

LeStrange touched Paul and Pierre on the shoulder, and beckoned them towards the inner room.

"Come," he said. "We will talk."

Marie looked at him interrogatively, but he avoided her curious eyes, and led the way into the room, Pierre and Paul following.

"The dice," Paul said. "He who throws highest to go."

Pierre nodded. He opened a drawer under the table, and took out a set of dice and a wooden cup.

"Take the cup, Paul," said LeStrange.

Paul hesitated, and then picked up the cup. He gave it a quick swirl and threw the ebony squares over the pinewood table. The eyes of Pierre and his father followed them voice, and beheld the sergeant standing in the door.

"Colonel wants you."

O'Neill sighed and went out. He found Ashton and Wren together, the former walking up and down with short rapid strides, as he was wont to do when unduly perturbed. He stopped as O'Neill entered and saluted.

"Ah—O'Neill. There's trouble up north. A man has been murdered at a place called St. Claire, south of Fort Carlton. Do you know it?"

"No, sir."

"Well, you'll find it. I want you to take charge of this case. I've no time to go into details—better take those papers. They are the depositions of various people relative to the crime. There is not much evidence to go upon. This seems to be the only thing of value, extracted by the doctor at Battleford."

He handed O'Neill a flattened bullet. The latter turned it round in his fingers.

"May I keep this, sir?"

"Yes. The man was an official of this new railway company—the Canadian Northern Ltd.—and the matter is therefore of some importance. It was because of that that I took it out of the hands of our people at Battleford. I think you are the man to get to the bottom of it."

"Thank you, sir. When can I start?"

"As soon as you have made yourself acquainted with the evidence—such as it is. Better take a good man with you. Bring me the papers before you leave."

Rodd had gone out on parade when O'Neill returned to the hut. He sat on his bed, and read through the brief and unilluminating documents. As Ashton had said the evidence was scanty. Jacob Dell had been found shot through the lungs in a hut a mile outside St. Claire, by his assistant, one George Rawlings. Dell had lived only two minutes after Rawlings' appearance on the scene—just time enough to explain that his assassin was short and dark, and wrapped in furs from head to foot. Dell had drawn his revolver immediately upon seeing the armed intruder, and had fired simultaneously, but whether his bullet had taken effect he could not say. Questioned by Rawlings as to whether he suspected anyone, the dying man nodded his head and tried to speak, but died before he could utter the name. The other evidence was formal and practically useless.

O'Neill made a few notes, and then returned the documents to Ashton.

He found Rodd engaged on a task that threatened to break the poor fellow's heart—carrying coal.

"Rodd!" he called. "Put down that bucket—you're wanted."

Rodd wiped his dusty brow and stared.

"Who wants me?" he gurgled.

"I do. Come on—the corporal knows."

Rodd followed O'Neill into the hut, and gazed in utter astonishment at the packages on the latter's bed.

"What are you framing for—deception?" he asked.

"Pack up," ordered O'Neill. "We're hitting the trail in an hour for St. Claire."

Rodd uttered a wild whoop of delight.

Rodd was ready by the time O'Neill had drawn rations, and placed them in the sleigh along with sundry other gear including sleeping bags and a small folding tent with iron pegs. Bramble, Fortesque and a dozen other men foregathered to bid them "bon voyage." Rodd seated himself in the sleigh whilst O'Neill took the reins.

"Whither away?" queried Bramble.

"Northward ho!"

"Is it Flood again?" asked Fortesque.

"Nope," retorted Rodd. "It's hell let her go, O'Neill."

Crack! They were off, rounding the corner in fine style and bumping over a hummock in a way that threatened to crack Rodd's long backbone.

They struck the lonely trail for the north.

The journey across the plains was destined to live forever in the memories of O'Neill and his companion. Day after day the sun shone with merciless glare from the sleepy-blue heavens, and the great cold increased. For eight days the travelers slept in their clothes, huddled up close to the oil stove, which seemed to give out no heat whatever. The sleeping bags, plus buffalo coat and several extra shirts, made no difference. Through all these the cold penetrated like a knife. The thermometer sunk to minus thirty, then forty, then fifty.

They sat in the shelter of the tent like two bears, eating with gloved hands, their noses skinned by the wind and the glare of the sun. They had discarded the snow spectacles days before, as the metal rims burnt their faces. A substitute was found in lamp-black, rubbed under the nose and eyes, for it was here that the merciless rays of the sun, reflected by the snow, played most havoc.

MISS O'FLAGE, NOW YOU'RE BACK FROM YOUR VACATION. I WANT TO HAVE A TALK WITH YOU. I'VE HAD A CHANCE TO NOTICE THINGS WHILE YOU WERE GONE—NOW WE'VE GOT TO DO THINGS A LITTLE DIFFERENTLY 'ROUND HERE—

Girl: "Will this bathing suit shrink?"

Clerk: "Yes, money back if not satisfied."

Bob of Our Heart.

Clerk (jocularly): "How many ice cream sodas can you eat?"

Bobbie: "How many have you got?"

"Yep," reminisced "Pa" Woods as he sat idly sucking his pipe.

"Mine and ma's a romance in two scenes. I seen her and she seen me."

Busy.

Caller: "Haven't you any idea when your mistress will be back?"

Maid: "It's very uncertain. She's in conference with her barber."

Atlanta Bar Endorses Judge L. F. McClelland

TO THE VOTERS OF FULTON COUNTY:

I have heretofore made formal announcement of my candidacy for the office of Judge of the Superior Court of Fulton County against Judge G. H. Howard. I do not believe that Judge Howard's very short sojourn in our midst entitles him to any claim for the Fulton Superior Court Judgeship, against one who has lived and labored here for more than thirty-five years.

I practiced law in this county for fifteen years before I went upon the bench. I have been a Judge of the Municipal Court of Atlanta for ten years, and if I did not have the endorsement of a very great majority of the members of the Atlanta bar, who have practiced with me as a lawyer and before me as a Judge, I would not offer for the high and exalted office of Judge of the Superior Court of Fulton county.

Below will be found an endorsement of the Atlanta Bar which speaks for itself.

Your vote, support and influence will be appreciated.

Yours truly,

L. F. McCLELLAND.

We believe Hon. L. F. McClelland to be well qualified for the position of Judge of the Superior Court of Fulton county, and that, if elected, he would make a good and satisfactory Judge, and we hereby endorse his candidacy.

Journal of Commerce Places Cotton Crop Condition at 62.2

New York, September 1.—(Special.) Special reports on the progress of the cotton crop in August received under an average date of August 25, reflect the deterioration that has taken place as a result of drought throughout nearly the whole of the cotton belt and show that more than 1,500 competent correspondents of this journal have felt compelled to lower their estimates of percentage condition to 62.2 per cent, a drop of 4.3 per cent for the month. This compares with 66.5 per cent at the end of July and a ten-year average of 65.2 per cent.

While the above showing is a disappointment to those who had anticipated a higher condition figure, it is far from discouraging when viewed in the light of conditions prevailing at this time last year. Per cent condition in August, 1923, was placed at 56.8 per cent, a decline of 13.6 per cent. A year earlier the August condition had fallen 14.1 per cent to 60.0 per cent, and in 1921 it stood at 55.1 per cent, or 12.7 per cent off.

Increased Acreage.
According to the government's revised estimate of 39,830,000 acres planted in cotton this year for the twelve principal cotton producing states included in this compilation, a percentage condition of 62.2 per cent would indicate under normal conditions during the remainder of the season a crop of 12,407,295 bales, or an increase over actual production last year of approximately 2,400,000 bales. Should these expectations be fulfilled it will be the largest crop of cotton made since 1920, when 13,489,003 bales were realized. During the year 1922 and 1921 yield was only 9,762,080 and 7,933,641 bales, respectively.

A feature of this, as well as other reports issued the past month, that may be worthy of a word of explanation is the apparent anomaly of a decline in condition of 4.3 per cent and an estimate increase in the probable yield of more than 900,000 bales over the figures given a month ago. This arises from the fact that production of cotton by bales is calculated on actual yield per acre as determined by past performances for say five years. In the present instance it so happens that August deterioration is much less, as already shown, than in the years immediately preceding, so that regardless of condition figured in percentages, the formula in use by both the government and private estimators, and in effect the only method for ascertaining prospective yield indicates a substantially larger "crop."

The accuracy of this system can only be proven by final ginning returns on the crop to be made public next December.

The frequent changes in the per acre yield this year have given rise to some unexpected estimates of production. These run as high as 13,340,000 bales, while condition estimates range from 68.8 per cent down to 61 per cent. Texas, after gaining 7.9 last month, dropped 7.1. In Mississippi also, an earlier gain was transformed into a loss of 4.5, while Louisiana declined 15.8 per cent. It is well to remember, however, that in spite of these losses, percentages in all of the states named stand well above those of last year. Texas condition then was only 55.9 per cent; Mississippi, 55.3 per cent; Alabama, 53.3 per cent; Georgia, 53.3 per cent; Arkansas, 53.3 per cent; Tennessee, 53.3 per cent; and even Florida all report advances over last year, ranging from 9 to 13 per cent. North Carolina, although lower than August of 1923, shows a gain for the month of 4.8. Oklahoma, with the highest condition of the entire list, 72.5, gained 10.9 per cent and contrasts with 53.8 per cent a year earlier.

When comparisons are thus drawn between condition prevailing last season and those of the present, it becomes easier to account for the spirit of unusual optimism displayed by many estimators over the outlook in the face of really serious drawbacks.

ALLEGED BUNCO LEADER WILL FACE TRIAL HERE

When government agents took charge of Clyde Smith, alleged aide of Floyd Woodward in numerous bunco operations in Atlanta and other parts of the country, his chance to fight extradition went glimmering, and he will be brought to this city for trial in the near future, it was stated Monday. Smith, who is held at Cleveland, will be brought to Atlanta by a United States marshal, accompanied by Bert Donaldson, special investigator from the solicitor general's office.

Smith, according to reports, had planned to fight extradition when it was the intention of Solicitor General John A. Boykin to bring him here to face state charges. Action of federal authorities in taking charge of Smith means that he may be tried first in federal court here under indictments growing out of his alleged operations in Atlanta. However, it is also possible that he may be turned over at once to the state for trial in Fulton county superior court.

Smith, who with other alleged members of the mammoth bunco syndicate, has been trailed by local and federal authorities, was arrested in Cleveland last Friday. Ed O. Ellis, another member of the gang, is in custody at Mexico City, but Woodward, alleged head of the band, is still a fugitive from justice, and his whereabouts are unknown.

ARRESTS FOLLOW TROLLEY HOLDUP

Following the bold robbery of a street car motorman while the car was jammed with people late Monday night, two negroes, Frank N. Tuggle, 25, of 180 Grant street, and his brother, Robert Tuggle, 30, of 141 Glenn street, have been arrested and police state have been identified by the motorman, J. L. Barker, of 23 Melburn street. Both, however, deny implication in the holdup.

According to the story told Call Officers Johnson and Cartright by Barker, who was in charge of an out-bound McDaniel street car, a signal to stop was given as the car neared Wells on McDaniel street. Two negroes, instead of alighting from the rear door, pushed to the front platform, and hidden from the conductor by several other negroes who were standing in the aisle, ordered Barker to hold up his hands.

While one of the bandits held a weapon against Barker's side, the other searched his pockets, taking a small amount of change. The thieves escaped through the crowd, which surged to the front of the car.

Police were notified and because of a new siren which gave their machine right-of-way over other traffic, arrived on the scene a few minutes after the holdup. The Tuggle brothers were arrested while walking on Wells street, about a block from the scene of the robbery, and are said to have been positively identified by Barker. They will be turned over to detectives for further questioning.

External Loan Twenty-Five Year 6½% Gold Bonds

To be dated September 1, 1924

To mature September 1, 1949

Redeemable as a whole or in part, at 105% and accrued interest, at the option of the Government, on and after September 1, 1939.

Monthly Sinking Fund payments commencing October 1, 1924, at the rate of $1,200,000 annually will be used to purchase Bonds, if obtainable, at not exceeding 100% and accrued interest, any unexpended portion of the monthly sinking fund payment at the end of any month to be credited against the next payment.

Interest payable March 1 and September 1

Principal and interest payable in United States Gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness in New York City either at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. or of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, without deduction for any Belgian taxes present or future.

Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 and $500, not interchangeable

J. P. MORGAN & CO. AND GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, FISCAL AGENTS

The following statement in regard to these Bonds and to the general resources of Belgium has been prepared from information furnished by M. Georges Theunis, Premier and Finance Minister of the Kingdom of Belgium:

PROVISIONS The Bonds are to be direct external obligations of the Kingdom of Belgium. They are to be issued under a Loan Contract in which the Kingdom of Belgium will covenant that if in the future it shall issue by public subscription any loan having a lien on any specific revenue or asset, these Bonds shall be secured equally and ratably with any such loan.

PURPOSE The proceeds of these Bonds are to be used to retire $18,500,000 Five Year 6% Gold Notes due January 1, 1925, and $8,559,445 6% Treasury Notes due January 1, 1925, and to that extent this issue does not increase the debt of Belgium.

ECONOMIC POSITION Economically Belgium has recovered from the war. Agricultural production is practically as large as in the years immediately preceding 1914. Industrial plants have been reconstructed with more modern and efficient machinery. There is practically no unemployment in the country. The output of the metallurgical, textile and glass industries, Belgium's chief industries, has attained or surpassed the prewar level.

DEBT The debt of Belgium on June 30, 1924, consisted of internal loans of 31,985,923,694 francs and external loans amounting, at present exchange rates, to approximately $451,000,000 (not including $171,780,000 advanced by the United States Government prior to the Armistice), of which the external debt in the hands of the public, after giving effect to the present bond issue and to the retirement of the 6% Dollar Notes maturing January 1, 1925, is $161,666,000, calling for interest and sinking fund payments of approximately $16,709,000 per annum.

BUDGET As a result of its policy of increased taxation and reduced expenditures, Belgium has made considerable progress towards budget equilibrium. Estimates for 1924, based on actual results for the first seven months show that revenues, including 1,300,000,000 francs German reparation payments of which over 80% has already been received, will exceed all the general and reconstruction expenses of the Government, exclusive of 857,000,000 francs to be spent on capital account for public works and railways.

Taking into account the expected yield from the new tax measures now before Parliament, it is expected that in 1925 Belgium revenues from taxes and operation of public properties will be sufficient to balance all expenditures by the Government exclusive of expenditures on capital account and reconstruction. The Government has announced a policy of limiting reconstruction expenditures, which it is estimated will not exceed 1,500,000,000 francs after 1924, to such sums as may be received from Germany. The London Agreement having been signed by the various governments concerned, after due ratification by the legislative bodies of France and Germany, reparation payments to Belgium, available for reconstruction and debt amortization, will be governed by the provisions of the Dawes plan.

The Government has taken measures to the end that no resort will be had to borrowing except to consolidate existing floating debt or to cover expenditures for income producing property.

WE OFFER THE ABOVE BONDS FOR SUBSCRIPTION, SUBJECT TO ALLOTMENT, AT 94% AND ACCRUED INTEREST, TO YIELD OVER 7%.

Subscription books will be opened at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Guaranty Company of New York at 10 o'clock A. M., Tuesday, September 2, 1924, and will be closed in their discretion.

All subscriptions will be received subject to the issue and delivery to us of the Bonds as planned, and to the approval by our counsel of their form and validity. The right is reserved to reject any and all applications, and also, in any event, to award a smaller amount than applied for.

Amounts due on allotments will be payable at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., in New York funds to their order, and the date of payment (on or about September 16, 1924) will be stated in the notices of allotment.

Kingdom of Belgium Five Year 6% Gold Notes and 6% Treasury Notes maturing January 1, 1925, with final coupon attached, will be accepted in payment at a price equivalent to a 31% interest yield basis computed from the date of payment for bonds allotted to January 1, 1925.

Trust Receipts will be delivered pending the preparation of the Definitive Bonds.

MARKETS

U. S. Cotton Reports Only Added
Hardship to Grower--Price

BY THEO. H. PRICE.

Editor Commerce and Finance.

The cotton market has regained most of the loss that was caused by the government report issued on the 23 of August and there are some people who think that the advance has remedied the harm done by the decline. But this is not the case and it is just as well that the farmers who grow the cotton and the manufacturers who turn it into goods should face the facts.

In no other business that I know of is the producer called on to take the risks that the cotton grower must face. In March or April he plants a crop that he cannot harvest until the succeeding October. For seven months he must gamble on the weather and the boll weevil. They are hazards against which there is no protection. But to them another is added. It is the hazard of the market, which is likewise beyond the farmer's control. He may make a good crop but a war or a panic may ruin him by depressing prices so that he will make a heavy loss instead of the meager profit upon which he had counted.

But he would at least have a chance if there were no government reports whose authority the speculators can invoke in depressing or advancing the price of cotton before it is harvested. When these reports are bearish in their significance the farmer finds the market out from under him. When they are bullish the price is generally lifted to an unreasonably high altitude long before the producer can take advantage of it and he is forced to sell on the ensuing decline which nearly always carries cotton below its intrinsic value.

And the hardship to the manufacturer is nearly as great. He only seeks to make a small profit for the service that he performs in converting cotton into goods, but in a market that may be away from 2 to 5 cents a pound every fortnight by a government report he is compelled to become a gambler also for it is no longer possible to sell goods and buy cotton simultaneously.

The result is that the great business of growing and manufacturing cotton has become a lottery mingled with the aid of the government in issuing its crop reports. Those who can guess these reports correctly draw the prizes and the others draw blanks or worse. Perhaps it would not be so bad if these government reports were correct but they are often wrong, they point to a different conclusion every two weeks and they keep the cotton market in a state of unrest that is paralyzing to legitimate business for most of the time.

Follows Old Proverb.

Even if they were supernaturally clairvoyant it is questionable whether their publication would be desirable, for it is an old proverb that "early information and plenty of bank credit will wreck the shrewdest merchant," and it is altogether likely that the man who knew the size of the crop in June would be bankrupt in October if he acted on his knowledge.

No, the truth is that—
"Heaven from all creatures hides the face of the future."

All but the page prescribed, the present state.

Nature never intended that we should be able to look very far into the future. We would be most unhappy if we could, and every attempt that we make to draw the veil that shuts tomorrow from our vision is almost certain to bring us trouble because it leads us to forget that common sense makes it necessary for us to feel our way as we go.

I am led into this disquisition upon the utility of the government reports by the fact that I have received a letter from a cotton grower commending what I wrote on the subject last week. For these letters I am much obliged and I hope the writers will not fail to take the matter up with their senators and representatives just as soon as Congress convenes.

As to the cotton market, it has become entirely a question of what the next government report will be. By the last report the public has been persuaded that the prospect now favors a large yield. This view is now so general that it needs no exploitation. If anything should happen to change it there would be a rude awakening and a sensational advance.

There is only one man who has had the courage to publicly oppose the prevalent belief in a crop of 13,000,000 bales or more. He is a well-known member of the New York Cotton Exchange. His name is Lee Rosenberg. He may be wrong, but because his estimate is unusual it is news. Therefore, I give it in full. It follows:

"On account of the cotton crop being so late it reached its greatest promise during the latter part of July and early August. A long-continued drought, coupled with the extreme lateness of the crop, postponed boll weevil damage at least two weeks. This condition accounts for the recent crop estimates of 13,000,000 bales. Since these reports, cotton has deteriorated very rapidly on account of the continued drought and boll weevil, which are now generally active over a very large area of the cotton belt. From now until frost, deterioration will be continuous and heavy. My estimate of the crop is 11,720,000 bales without linters. The details by states are as follows:

Texas	3,900,000
Oklahoma	950,000
Arkansas	970,000
Louisiana	300,000
North Carolina	800,000
South Carolina	900,000
Georgia	1,200,000
Alabama	900,000
Mississippi	1,000,000
Tennessee	400,000
Mo., Cal. and others	400,000
Total	11,720,000

Meantime business is improving in Europe as well as in the United States and if the government had not persuaded the world that a crop of 13,000,000 bales might be raised most of it would probably have been sold before its size could be ascertained or realized and used to depress the market.

Cotton seed oil has been active during the past week. Fluctuations at times were very erratic and have covered a wide range. Values at one time broke sharply, scoring a decline of 13-4 to 21-3 cents per pound from the season's best levels. Final quotations were 73 to 98 points lower on the nearby deliveries while the late months were 32 to 34 points off from the previous week's close.

Early in the week factors tending to influence the market were of a somewhat adverse character. The government cotton condition report was construed as bearish. Lard declined about 100 points and started a general liquidating movement in oil. Long interests became uneasy over the action of the outside markets and liquidated freely, principally in the nearby months. When the urgent liquidation appeared to have been completed and the outside markets again displayed a better tone active buying became evident, bringing in scattered short covering.

Spot oil is reported in good demand and the market is strong as there is little disposition on the part of the mills to make offers freely.

MONEY
AT WORKBrief But Important Lessons in Finance.
Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.WHAT IS A TURNOVER?

Turnover measures the efficient use of capital invested in stock.

Suppose you owned a piano store and your stock consisted of one piano for which you paid $500. The number of times you used that $500 to buy a new piano to replace one sold is your stock turnover. If you had two such pianos and sold the same number of pianos your turnover

Money is worth at least 6 per cent in the way of interest so what you lose in interest by having money tied up in pianos or what you pay as interest in borrowing is a cost of doing business. If you can increase your turnover by having only five hundred dollars instead of a thousand in stock you increase your income because you can invest the other $500 in some outside security.

Stores watch turnover very carefully. For increased turnover reduces expenses and increases profits and at the same time gives customers fresher merchandise.

FIGHT TO BE AIDED
BY RECORDER TODAY

The battle Saturday afternoon between W. G. McCoy, 62-year-old railroad conductor, and L. M. Tribble, 37, of 47 Oak street, and W. D. Moore, 47, of West Fourteenth street, which came near costing McCoy his life, will be aired in police court this afternoon, following the latter's release from Grady hospital Monday.

Charges of disorderly conduct were docketed against the trio, McCoy being at liberty under a "copy of charges," while Tribble and Martin were placed under bonds of $200 each. Arrests were made by Patrolmen Stribling, Smith and Hightower.

McCoy charges that Tribble started the quarrel and that while they were "scuffling" on the ground, Moore struck him (McCoy) in the head with a brick. Tribble and Moore claim that the latter's part in the affair was that of a peacemaker, who interfered after McCoy had drawn a knife and threatened the life of Tribble.

FULTON CHILDREN TO REPORT FRIDAY
FOR SCHOOL YEAR

Fulton county children will report to school buildings nearest their homes Friday to be assigned to classes for the year. Superintendent J. W. Simmons announced Monday.

Katherine Mitchell, supervisor of county schools, will give normal examination to all white teachers at the court house Thursday morning. Increased seating space to house an expected record enrollment has been provided at Inman yards with a new building, and at Howell, Lakewood, Hapeville, Marion Smith and Perkinson school where temporary classrooms have been built.

JUNIOR CHAMBER
MEMBERS ON TRIP
TO MANY CITIES

Headed by John M. Slaton, Jr., chairman of the extension work, a delegation from the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce will leave Friday for a tour of organization and extension in Georgia and South Carolina.

The delegation will first visit Augusta, then Columbus, and last Charleston, S. C. The Atlantans will cooperate with citizens in each of these cities in the work of organizing Junior Chambers of Commerce.

Among those who will accompany Mr. Slaton on the trip are Roy LeCraw, president, George E. Meyers, E. Smythe (Gambrell), Horace Russell, J. Forsyth Gordy, Dr. Stephen Baldwin, Chess Lagomarsino, A. L. Lippitt, Austin Abbott, Ed. Robertson, Ben Perryman, Harry Camp, I. M. Shufeld, Fred T. Newell, assistant secretary.

BOOZE CARS WRECKED
BUT DRIVERS ESCAPE

County police with the aid of city detectives Monday night were searching for occupants of two whisky cars who made their escape as their whisky laden machines were wrecked when pursued by county officers early in the morning.

A total of 214 gallons of corn whisky was captured and the two automobiles seized and confiscated. One car contained 114 gallons. This was captured by Vinson and Dickerson on the Mayson-Turner road. The other car, captured on the Roswell road by Cates and Lyle, contained 100 gallons.

KIWANIS TO MEET
AT ANSLEY TUESDAY

The Kiwanis' open forum meeting, at which every Kiwanian will be invited to speak on some topic of general interest toward the betterment of Atlanta, will be held at noon Tuesday at the Ansley hotel.

The purpose of the open forum meeting, it is said, is to encourage an exchange of ideas. Frank J. Reynolds, assistant manager of the Ansley hotel, will discuss possible remedies for elimination of downtown traffic congestion.

Boston Installs Sewers.

Thomasville, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—Boston has just completed an up-to-date sewerage system, which has been in course of construction for some time. The work required the temporary blocking up of the gravel road leading from Thomasville to Boston and a necessary detour for cars, but with the completion of the sewerage work, there is no longer need for that.

$30,000,000 BELGIAN
LOAN OFFERED TODAY

New York, September 1.—Public offering of $30,000,000 Belgian government external loan, 25-year, 6 1/2 per cent gold bonds will be made tomorrow by a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan and company, and the Guarantee Company of New York. The price is 94 and accrued interest, to yield slightly more than 7 per cent.

Provision is made for monthly sinking fund payments, beginning October 1, 1924, at the rate of $1,200,000 annually, to be used, it was stated, to purchase bonds, if obtainable, at not more than 100 per cent and accrued interest. Any unexpended portion of the monthly sinking fund payments at the end of the month will be credited against the next payment. The proceeds of the bonds will be used to retire $27,000,000 Belgian government notes maturing January 1, 1925. Theunis, Belgian minister of finance, has pointed out that after this financing and the retirement of the dollar notes provided for by this issue, the government's external debt in the hands of the public would be approximately $101,000,000 at current exchange rates, excluding governmental loans and advances to Belgium.

A Substantial Factor in the Progressive Development of the South

Each Dot Represents a Bond Issue
Underwritten by CALDWELL & COMPANY
(There are 663 dots on the above map)

Caldwell & Company, investment bankers, have had the privilege of playing an important part in financing Southern progress. Over 660 Southern bond issues, amounting to many millions of dollars, have been bought and sold by this company.

CALDWELL & COMPANY have been the means through which hundreds of Southern cities, towns and counties—large and small, near and remote—have received funds for needed improvements. With its offices in the North and East, one part of this organization has reached into the financial centers of the country while the other has turned the money there received over to the progressive city, town or rural community which could not otherwise have obtained the funds necessary for proper growth and public welfare.

Schools, highways, streets, water and light plants, hotels, apartments, drainage systems, public institutions, office buildings, factories, theatres, hospitals, churches—these are some of the works which Caldwell & Company have helped to build.

In these achievements of the South this investment house feels a particular pride. . . . And with a pride perhaps a little more personal, they point to the fact that out of the hundreds of bond issues dotted on the map above, representing the business of Caldwell & Company from their first underwriting to the present day, not a single bond issue has defaulted in the hands of a purchaser.

Those interested in sound Southern Investments or in obtaining the services of a leading Southern Investment House in financial matters, should write for a copy of the booklet, "Investment Bankers of the South."

Pola Negri's latest picture, "Lily of the Dust," was shown for the first time at the Howard theater yesterday.

The picture reveals Miss Negri in a role radically different from anything she has attempted before. Hereafter she has essayed the heartless, fiery temptress, but in this one it is another thing. She plays the role of a lovely woman. In fact it is the best picture that this star has ever offered.

Vic Myers' Melody Artists, with Catherine Jones in several pretty dance numbers, received several rounds of applause.

For the overture the Howard theater orchestra, under the conductorship of Paul B. Rinsinger, offered "Sembrando," from Rossini's opera, "Tosca," a screaming comedy, closes the program.

"The Covered Wagon." (At the Rialto.)

Atlanta's night night itself a remarkable tribute as well as to that classic of the screen, "The Covered Wagon," as tremendous crowds flocked to see it at the Rialto theater in spite of the fact that it has been shown twice before in Atlanta. The Rialto is offering it this week.

Colleen Moore. (At the Metropolitan.)

Super entertainment is "Flirting With Love," the Metropolitan picture co-starring Colleen Moore and Conway Tearle, which opened last night at the Metropolitan theater for a week's run.

We cannot remember ever seeing a picture before in which these two popular screen players were together, but after viewing this delightful picture of stage life we will look forward with anticipation to their next appearance together.

Based on the story of Scott's story, "Counterfeit," this photoplay establishes the case of Gilda Laro, played by Colleen Moore. There are several scenes of Gilda, who like the "Riders of the Purple Sage," must suffer ignominy for sacrifice.

First Vaudeville Proves Excellent Bill at Forsyth

Keith's contingent of artists at the Forsyth theater gave an A-1 first-class vaudeville entertainment Monday night.

It was the opening night of the winter season, so far as the Forsyth is concerned, and consistent with the tradition of the Forsyth, Keith is sending out a grade of vaudeville that beats anything Atlanta has ever had.

Hap Farnell is the headliner. He and a young lady by the name of "Florence" get away with lots of good lines, music, and in some instances, murder. Hap Farnell is just the sort of fellow you'd expect to be named Hap. He plays the part of one who is slightly incapacitated by a condition of the dead end, is marvelous.

Clifford Wayne, a diminutive young Indian boy, came next in the line of Monday night's entertainment. He is assisted by a dazzling Indian maiden and, a powerful good natured Indian citizen in a tuxedo, "Master" Wayne, as he is called, is a really good Indian in the banquet clothes, plays the violin with all the feeling and power of a great artist. As soon as he finishes his act, he steps out and does a Senegambian song-and-dance number. Several acrobatic stunts, novelty dances, and songs from the Indian girl round out the act splendidly.

Mabel Harper and company offer a style of humor and harmony which is unusual as it is seriously good. Miss Harper has a marvelous control of her vocal organs, and she uses it on brand-new, catchy songs.

Stanley and Thompson present a delightful little skit filled with song and fun, which well received Monday night. The Spirit of B-1 is an act in comedy, mystery and a number of entertaining dances from beautiful young dancers.

Ventriloquist Act

Tops Weekly Bill

At Loew's Theater

Marshall Montgomery proved to be an Atlanta audience at Loew's Grand theater last night that he is the greatest ventriloquist on the stage today. He gave a sensational and hilarious performance that appeared as if he were a man, but which were performed under the most difficult circumstances. He gave a sensational and hilarious performance that appeared as if he were a man, but which were performed under the most difficult circumstances.

Next to this headline act was the feature picture, "Revelation," with Viola Dana, Monte Blue, Lew Cody and several other stars. The picture is a masterpiece of the early days and to carry it out, the scenes are laid in France.

The Yong Wong troupe of five Chinese showed extraordinary skill in acrobatic work. A young Chinese boy, hardly over eight or nine years old, was the central figure. The work of this young Chinese is the best that has been seen here in some time.

Tony Cornetto and company, two men and a woman, kept the house in an uproar with comedy that bordered on the slapstick, but they were so fearless, was laugh-provoking. This trio seemed to have the knack of making an audience laugh and keeping them laughing. They were rewarded by three or four curtain calls.

Jack Danger sang a couple of new songs as a preliminary to his juggling of Indian clubs.

Healy, Reynolds and Saxton, who opened the show, had quite a variety of offerings, but their long act was on the violin and banjo. They showed quite skill in this line and their several numbers made a distinct hit.

FATHER MOVES GUN TO PROTECT LAD AND WOUNDS SELF

Savannah, Ga., September 1.—(Special.)—J. W. McConnell, superintendent of a large lumber concern near Hardeeville, S. C., is in a local hospital today seriously wounded by a pistol shot. Coming to Savannah in his auto, with eight-year-old son Woodron, the father reached over to move a pistol on the seat of the car out of reach of the lad and it was accidentally discharged. The ball shattered his arm and penetrating his body. He will recover, doctors say.

LYRIC PERFORMERS

REVIVE MRS. WIGGS IN CABBAGE PATCH

A leaf out of a loved old book, a reminiscence of happy days, a laugh, a tear, another laugh, and then a smile that lasts even into one's dreams—

That is "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," as the Lyric players, with "Fiddlin' John" Carson, presented it to almost enraptured audiences at two performances Monday.

The play is a "character comedy," which means that the character actors of the company get the fat roles.

Loraine Bernard, back after a vacation, and welcome as a shower on a hot summer's day, had the lugubrious character as Miss Hazy, and she swept her audience into hysterics of laughter.

Gus Forbes was Mr. Stubbs, the alcoholic bachelor who is steered into marriage with her by the golden hearted Mrs. Wiggs. Ramona Weaver was Mrs. Wiggs.

Miss Edith King, leading woman, and Wilfred Lytle, leading man, were "Loves Mary" and "Billy Wiggs," and each of them injected a generous bit of real soul into the pretty romance. Miss King was a bit of a sensation in a red wig.

The cast was augmented with nine Atlanta young men, and trotted out our old friend "Fiddlin' John" Carson in a program of old time tunes and blues songs that rocked the house and brought down the curtain.

"Mrs. Wiggs" has been seen so often that a recital of its story is a needless waste of space. The Lyric players did it as well as this department has ever seen it done, with a degree of pep and smoothness on the part of the Lyric players, that speaks well for the mastery of direction of Edwin Hall.

'The Ten Commandments' Is Greatest Movie Yet

Beyond a doubt this picture, "The Ten Commandments," which opened the new season at the Atlanta theater last night, is the most spectacular thing the moving picture wizards have yet given us. That statement is made advisedly, after careful thought on the many tremendous things the movies have done in the past.

In seeking for the time, the place and the story on which to pitch his hopes of the stupendous, Cecil DeMille, the director went to the Old Testament, took from it the most dramatic of all stories, the exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt. Sea while the waters stand back, and proceeded to work modern miracles. The city of Rameses, the Magnificent, Pharaoh of all the Egyptians, the palace of the Pharaoh; the great gods of Egypt; the fleeing host of Israelites, escaping from their bondage into the desert; the six hundred chariots and mighty horsemen of the Pharaoh; all these are shown upon the screen with an awe inspiring vastness and power.

The Waters Divide. The sequence of scenes, where the Israelites safely cross the Red Sea while the waters stand back,

The Ballard Make

Not a department, cut rate, or just as good for less money, but the best of everything. The best price and the best service possible, is responsible for the growth of our business—in fact, the majority of our better oculists are glad when you tell them you want Ballard to fill your glasses prescription. Just ask them. We have filled their prescriptions for many years and they know how we do business. There is no use going to a first-class oculist and then have your glasses made by a second-class oculist. There never was a time when the market was so flooded with imperfect ground glasses. We are in position to take care of your wants to the limit for high-class optical service.

If you do not know us ask someone who does.

GEO. F. LINDNER, Director

PEACHTREE AND BROAD STREETS, ATLANTA, GEORGIA

in two mighty walls on either hand, where the armies of Pharaoh are swelled up in the angry waters when they try to follow, is the most unbelievable thing any of us have ever had the opportunity of witnessing. It will be the talk of the town for long after the picture has concluded this week's engagement and gone.

There are other scenes, however, which come later which outdo even this in impressiveness. The scenes were Moses, on Mount Sinai, talking with God and receiving at his hands the Ten Commandments, written on tablets of stone—

You can't believe their effectiveness unless you see them for yourself.

Modern Parallel.

The latter half of the picture is laid in modern times. It is the story of a youth who laughs, and scoffs, and sneers at the ancient law of God. He breaks them all, the 10, before the end, and learns, too late, that he himself must be broken as the result.

It is a picture filled with thrills. It is magnificently produced and perfectly acted. The scenes of "Pharaoh," Charles de Roche, "Pharaoh," Estelle Taylor, "Miriam," are outstanding figures in the Biblical portion of the story. In the modern parallel, Edythe Chapman, Richard Dix, Rod La Roque, Leatrice Joy, Rita Naldi are the stars.

The presentation at the Atlanta is typical of the best in modern screen offerings. An orchestra of 20 musicians under the baton of Conductor Orville P. Mayhew interprets a specially-written score that adds tremendously to the effectiveness of the drama, but is never guilty of the mistake of overshadowing the picture in the consciousness of the audience—if such a thing were possible.

House Beats Record.

The house was crowded Monday at both matinee and night performances. It is an interesting comment to note that the house offerings of the first night, "The Ten Commandments," beat the long-standing picture record of the house, set by the first matinee performance of "The Birth of a Nation," that day, and, by the way, was a Labor day. And as for the picture itself—it relegates the famous Griffith film to the ranks of comparatively simple things done in the early days of the screen.

"The Ten Commandments" will be at the Atlanta, for two performances daily, for the balance of the week. The only question to be decided should be, just how many people can get in to see it, and who are going to be the fortunate ones to secure seats before the "sold-out" sign is placed in the lobby.

By the way, the picture is made under the new photographic process which reproduces the natural colors with astounding tenderness to its beauty and life-like effect.

—RALPH T. JONES.

May We Impress Upon You

—the vital importance of having your eyes examined regularly, and wearing glasses that protect and strengthen your vision. Thousands of people suffer needlessly, because they do not heed the warning given by over strained eyes. We can fit you with glasses that will relieve eye strain, stop headaches and be exceedingly comfortable to wear. If your oculist gives you a prescription for glasses, he wants it filled accurately and knows that if you come to us, it will be. Remember us for "good looking glasses perfectly fitted."

Mayorality Campaign Issues Discussed by Sims and Key

Charges by Mayor Walter Sims that former Mayor Key shifts position often and easier than the wind and charges by Key that the negotiation of a $350,000 loan for schools was a "political stall" to "square" the mayor with the school board supporters and carry favor for the Georgia Railway & Power Co. were exchanged by the two candidates for mayor at a Labor day political rally in Maddox park Monday afternoon.

Mayor Sims and former Mayor Key were the principal speakers on a list of nearly a dozen who kept political fire flying during most of the afternoon at Maddox park. Mayor Sims was the first speaker of the day, delivering his message to a crowd of nearly 600 which was dispersed by rainstorm a few minutes after he had concluded, fewer than 200 of the more hardy members remaining, wet and bedraggled through a gentle drizzle for more than three hours while former Mayor Key and the others presented their claims for popular suffrage.

Key declared inconsistent. Charging this for shifts position often and easier than the wind, Mayor Sims again dealt sharply with former Mayor Key's record.

"Ask him what he stands for," every question that concerned the town," said the mayor, "and then sometimes he stands for nothing." "Ask him what he stands for in this race. He hasn't told you. When you vote for a man you ought to demand that he stand for something."

"Let him offer you his program and it will be this: Increased taxes—emergency taxes."

"Would Have Closed Schools." He would have closed the schools and the teachers would have to go elsewhere this fall to find employment. Do you mean to say you'd swap me out when I have saved you $250,000 in one time, for a man who has done nothing but increase your taxes."

"I don't believe him when he says 'taxpayers will elect him mayor,' but I would rather go down to the schools to close in the faces of your boys and your girls, and send our children to the streets, than to have permitted the doors of the schools to close in the faces of your boys and your girls, and send our children to the streets, than to have permitted the doors of the schools to close in the faces of your boys and your girls, and send our children to the streets."

The "same game" that fought him two years ago is aligned with Key trying to bring about his defeat in the campaign," asserted the mayor. "It's the same crowd that backed Beavers," he said, "but they've had some of their teeth pulled and they're weaker this time. It's the same game I fought as a member of council and Key wouldn't fight."

"When you stop to think of his record you will swap him again with a majority such as you did two years ago when he ran against Upham for congress."

Key's Connection With Police. Mayor Sims brought into the spotlight the criminal records of a number of police officers, two of whom are now fugitives from justice wanted on serious charges, while several have been convicted and are now serving prison terms. All of them, he said, were appointed on the police force while Key was a member of the board.

He read a list of the names of the men and the charges against them, citing them as an answer to Key's criticism of the present administration on account of the killing of Haines by Police Officer E. C. Stigall last year. The list which the mayor read included the name of Stigall, who was Key's appointee while he was mayor and ex-officio member of the police board, according to Sims.

"So there's his record on that, and he's in bad shape," commented the mayor.

The mayor offered to compare public records of the two candidates.

Majority of the same candidates spoke again Monday night at the meeting of the Ninth Ward Civic league in the North Avenue school.

Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, Representative Bessie Kempton and Councilman Allen Couch represented his candidacy for alderman from the fifth ward.

Ed Stephens spoke in behalf of Solicitor General John A. Boykin, Alderman Claude E. Buchanan spoke in the interests of his race for council.
